Board Gives Up Effort to End Coal Stoppage

Mediators Plan No Further Steps To Reopen Mines, Davis Announces

Efforts of the National Defense Mediation Board to settle the soft-coal strike now crippling defense industries on a steadily increasing scale ended last night in collapse.

After three days of desperate efforts to compose differences between the Northern operators, the Southern operators and the United Mine Workers, the board panel in charge of the case announced that it planned no further action.

The panel unanimously recommended acceptance by all three groups of President Roosevelt's March 21 formula for reopening the mines immediately, a formula already rejected by the Southern operators. Then it adjourned its hearings.

Refusal of Southern operators to accept the wage scale agreed upon by Northern operators and the union, or to reopen their mines immediately with later negotiations to fix wages retroactive to the date of resuming operations, brought the impasse.

Apparently the crisis has been placed in President Roosevelt's hands again, though the three groups will be summoned today before the special Senate committee, headed by Senator Truman, of Missouri, which is investigating progress in the defense program.

Split Over Differential

William H. Davis, vice chairman of the board and head of the panel to which was referred the 27-day-old tie-up of the Nation's bituminous mines, issued a statement after collapse of the hearings, saying that the issue of eliminating the 40-cent-a-day wage differential granted the Southerners in previous contracts had blocked an agreement.

The Northern wage heretofore has been $6 a day, that in the South $5.60. Northern operators and the union headed by John L. Lewis have agreed on a straight $7 a day wage for the entire industry. Southerners have rejected the universal wage.

Statement by Davis

Davis' statement said:

"The panel of the National Defense Mediation Board, designed to act in the dispute between the bituminous coal operators and the United Mine Workers of America, has explored at length the matters in controversy. The proceedings have been conducted in the presence of the fact that the President of the United States on April 21, 1941, publicly recommended and urged that:

"'1. The miners and operators already in agreement resume coal production under the terms of that agreement.

"'2. The operators and miners who have not yet reached an agreement, enter into wage negotiations and at the same time reopen the mines, the agreement ultimately reached to be made retroactive to the date of resuming work.'

"Throughout the discussion, the principal point in controversy and the one which, in the judgment of the panel, has prevented an agreement, was the matter of a differential in the daily wage rate be-

Rockefeller Urges Aid at Any Cost

New York, April 27 (AP).—John D. Rockefeller declared today it was his "firm conviction, arrived at in anguish of spirit" that the people of the United States and all the Americas "should stand by the British Empire to the limit and at any cost."

Rockefeller

Calling for the American people to stand solidly behind President Roosevelt and to see that quantities of war munitions sufficient to win victory were "laid down at Britain's door," Rockefeller said the issue being fought was freedom versus slavery and added:

"I would rather die fighting the brutal, barbarous, inhuman force represented by Hitlerism than live in a world which is dominated by that force."

Woman Killed, Husband Hurt In Shooting

Bethesda Couple Shot While Visiting In Germantown, Md.

A 36-year-old Bethesda, Md., woman was slain with a shotgun and her husband critically injured in a blast from the same gun last night when they were attacked by a Germantown, Md., man as they visited in a friends home there.

Mrs. Clara Robertson, of 108 Auburn Avenue, Bethesda, died instantly after being shot once with a 12-gauge shotgun. Her husband, John Robertson, is in "serious" condition in Montgomery County Hospital at Olney, suffering from two wounds.

According to Dr. C. E. Hawks, Montgomery County medical examiner, who conducted an investigation into the double shooting, Mrs. Robertson and her husband were visiting at the home of John B. Thompson, 83, when the slaying occurred.

Dr. Hawks placed the time of Mrs. Robertson's death at "about 8 o'clock."

Police arrested for investigation Thompson's son, Dewey, 43-year-old painter.

Sergt. Roy Bodmer, who headed the Montgomery County police investigation, said the shootings took place following a heated argument between the suspect and his father's guests over the younger Thompson's arrest last week on a disorderly conduct warrant.

Sergt. Bodmer said Thompson left the room and returned a few minutes later with the shotgun and three extra shells. Entering the living room, Sergt. Bodmer said, Thompson told him, he confronted Robertson with the loaded gun. When Robertson told him he "didn't have enough nerve to shoot," Thompson is reported to have told police "I shot him."

Mrs. Robertson, hearing the report, ran toward the house from the front yard screaming. As she entered the room, the suspect told

U. S. Must 'Deliver the Goods' To Britain, China, Bullitt Says

William C. Bullitt, former Ambassador of France, declared last night that America must keep open the lifeline of war supplies to Great Britain and China, or face alone the united onslaught of the Axis dictators in this hemisphere.

"The British and Chinese are hard-pressed," he said. "For our own salvation we must turn all our strength into producing instruments of defense for them and for ourselves.

"We must not only produce, but also deliver the goods. If we hesitate and vainly hope for temporary safety, then we shall surely perish."

3,500 Participate

Again and again an audience of 3,500, participating in a United China Relief program at Constitution Hall here, applauded and cheered as Bullitt emphasized his belief that "for our own preservation, whatever the consequences, we must back the British and Chinese." The address was broadcast over the country through the Columbia Broadcasting System.

A gigantic dragon, manned by 60 members of the Chinese Youth Club here, ceremoniously welcomed the throng as it entered Constitution Hall.

The atmosphere was further enlivened by 100 pretty debutantes and post-debutantes, 50 Chinese girls in native costume, 50 Campfire Girls and Girl Scouts, who mingled with the audience of diplomats, Government officials, society folk, and other sympathizers—selling packaged tea for the benefit of Chinese relief.

Elman Performs

And the response to the playing of Mendelssohn's Concerto in E minor by Mischa Elman, noted violinist, aroused an outburst of enthusiasm that was not quieted by two encores.

But the real feeling of the audience was revealed when Bullitt spoke, and demanded that America take positive action to preserve its liberties.

"It may be that in supporting with all our resources and all our strength the British and the Chinese, we shall have war," Bullitt said.

"It may be that we shall not have war.

"But support them we will!"

The hall reverberated with the affirmation of the audience.

Bullitt, who also served as American envoy to Russia, described the recent Soviet-Japan pact as "Hitler's gift to the Japanese militarists."

He added, however, that the pact "will bring some gain if it makes all

Farm Payment Rise Opposed By Roosevelt

White House Urges House Conferees To Block Increase

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

Administration pressure to prevent boosts in agricultural and other nondefense appropriations while calling on the people for drastically increased tax contributions to the defense efforts were disclosed last night in authoritative Government circles.

As the House Ways and Means Committee prepared to open its $3,600,000,000 tax bill hearings to spokesmen for groups that will be vitally affected by the projected levies, it was learned that the White House had passed the word to House leaders to stand firm against about $450,000,000 of additions to the politically popular agriculture appropriation bill, which were added to the measure by the Senate.

This action was recognized as being in line with the suggestion that an earnest effort be made to reduce the Government's annual nondefense budget by $1,000,000,000, which was voiced by Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury, during his testimony Thursday before the Ways and Means Committee. The White House move to head off Congressional capitulation to the lure of increasing agricultural expenditures over budget requirements was described as having been made irrespective of the Morgenthau economy suggestion, leaving the proposed $1,000,000,000 reduction intact as a goal. Thus far, however, few members of Congress have professed to see much chance that such a sum can be pared from the "regular" expenditures of the Government.

Parleys May Start Soon

Conferences for adjustment of differences between the Senate and House over the Agriculture Appropriation Bill may get under way this week.

As passed by the House on March 7, the bill called for expenditures during the next fiscal year aggregating $890,824,000, which was slightly under budget estimates. When it got through the Senate on April 3, the total had been raised to $1,340,000,000, the highest amount ever voted into an agriculture appropriation bill. Among the Senate increases was an item of $450,000,000 for "farm parity" payments, which contrasted with $212,000,000 recommended by the President and voted by the House.

The House Ways and Means Committee, meanwhile, was slated to hear today the first four witnesses representing the public in its hearings on proposals to raise $3,600,000,000 in new taxes.

Athens Falls, Nazis Sweep On To Cut Off British Rearguard; Churchill Hails U. S. Sea Patrol

Prime Minister Expects War's Spread, Perhaps To Spain, Soviet

By the Associated Press

London, April 27.—The "tremendous decision" of the United States to patrol the "wide waters of the Western Hemisphere" was hailed by Prime Minister Churchill tonight as vital to the battle which Britain must win to survive—the Battle of the Atlantic.

"No far-seeing man can doubt," he declared, "that the eventual and total defeat of Hitler and Mussolini is certain in view of the respective and declared resolves of the British and American democracies."

In a grim 30-minute review of the entire war situation, broadcast to the empire and to America, Churchill acknowledged the German victories in Yugoslavia and Greece and predicted:

"We must now expect the war in the Mediterranean, on the sea and in the desert, and, above all, in the air, to become very fierce, varied and widespread . . .

No Safety From Justice

"War may spread to Spain and Morocco, to Turkey and Russia. The Germans may lay their hands upon the granaries of the Ukraine or the oil wells of the Caucasus, but there is one thing which is certain: Hitler cannot find safety from avenging justice in the Middle East or the Far East."

Instead, Churchill said, "to win this war he (Hitler) must defeat this island or cut the lifelines between us and the United States.

"That is what is called the Battle of the Atlantic, which, in order to survive, we have got to win on salt water just as decisively as we had to win the battle of Britain last August and September in the air."

For this rason, the Prime Minister asserted, it was with "indescribable relief" that he learned of the United States patrol decision.

"Bound to Happen"

"The American fleet and flying boats have been ordered to patrol the wide waters of the Western Hemisphere, and to warn the peaceful shipping of all nations outside the combat zone of the presence of lurking U-boats or raiding cruisers belonging to the two aggressor nations."

Therefore Britain will be able to concentrate on the ocean routes nearer home, said the Prime Minister, declaring fervently:

"I felt for some time that something like this was bound to happen."

The Battle of the Atlantic still will be "long and hard," said Churchill, but the United States is responding to his plea of ten weeks ago for the "tools" of war, and the battle "has entered upon a more grim but at the same time a far more favorable phase."

Only 2 Divisions in Libya

He stated that Americans were 'taxing themselves heavily" and had turned a large part of their "gigantic" industry to making the munitions which Britain needs.

"I could not believe that they would allow the high purposes to which they set themselves to be frustrated and the products of their skill and labor sunk to the bottom of the sea," he said, remarking that the President and Congress of the United States had pledged aid to Britain "because they know their own interests and safety would be endangered if we were destroyed."

The Prime Minister gave only a short exposition of the situation in Greece and North Africa, but disclosed that the army with which Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell defeated the Italians in Libya at no time exceeded two divisions, or about 30,000 men.

When Greece called for aid against the Germans, it was a point of honor for Britain to send it, Churchill said, despite the small size of the Imperial Army in Africa.

"It happened that the best divisions available for this task were from New Zealand and Australia," he said, and about half the expeditionary force to Greece was composed of these men.

'But Westward, Look . . .'

Prime Minister Winston Churchill expressed his and Britain's reliance on the United States in incomparably eloquent and apt language yesterday when he closed his speech with a quotation from a poem entitled "Say Not the Struggle Naught Availeth."

The poem was written a century ago by Arthur Hugh Clough. The verses which Churchill read, with such feeling as to bring lumps to the throats of listening Americans:

For while the tired waves, vainly breaking
Seem here no painful inch to gain
Far back through creeks and inlets making
Comes silent flooding in the main.

And not by eastern windows only,
When daylight comes . . . comes in the light.
In front the sun climbs slow, how slowly,
But westward, look, the land is bright.

Clough was born in Liverpool in 1819, was brought to the United Statse at the age of 3, and lived several years in Charleston, S. C., where his father was a cotton merchant. He died in 1861.

Ukraine Next On Hitler List, Vichy Predicts

French Also Expect Germany to Open Assault on Gibraltar

By the Associated Press

Vichy, April 27.—Diplomatic circles here expressed belief today Germany's next thrust would be toward the Russian Ukraine.

Diplomats said proof of this belief lies in unconfirmed reports of troop movements from Siberia toward the western frontiers of Russia.

The reported German move toward the Ukraine, it was said, was closely bound up with prospect of Nazi occupation of Spain and passage of German troops through the unoccupied zone of France.

The diplomats said there never had been any question of Spain not adhering to the Axis if Germany demanded it. The only problem was whether it was advantageous for Germany to undertake troop movements through already undernourished Spain in order to close the western entrance to the Mediterranean, the diplomats said.

It was understood here that Germany would have to have food before she would be able to undertake such a move.

The only place where this food is available is in the Russian Ukraine. If Stalin were able to drive a bargain with Hitler, the diplomats said, food would come through normally, but if they were unable to reach an agreement war would follow.

Rome Predicts New Conquests

Rome, April 27 (AP).—The prominent commentator, Alfredo Signoretti, forecast in La Stampa, of Turin, today that the Axis would use its virtually completed conquest of Europe as a "springboard" for new advances.

He indicated that the next stake in the battle would be for possession of Suez, whence the Axis forces would drive for further triumphs against the British power.

Signoretti indicated there might be early action to wrest Gibraltar, Malta and Crete from the British, but described these merely as islands with secondary importance in the vast struggle.

Axis Troops Push 20 Miles Into Egypt

Warships Shelling Army on Sea Road Toward Sidi Barrani

By International News Service

Cairo, April 27.—Warships of the British Mediterranean fleet and motorized troops of the Imperial army fought savagely tonight to stem a drive by Italian and German armored forces which was acknowledged to have crossed the Egyptian frontier near Salum and penetrated 20 miles eastward toward Sidi Barrani.

Warships hurled huge shells into Axis forces advancing along the sea road, Cairo military sources said, while motorized forces harrassed the enemy's flanks.

The two Axis columns which so far have battered their way into Egypt were composed chiefly of Italians, it was claimed.

Shortly after this was announced, a Royal Air Force communique claimed British bombers attacked shipping and military objectives in Bengasi harbor.

A number of enemy oil tanks were destroyed between Derna and Barce, the communique stated, adding that planes of the South African Air Force successfully bombed and machine-gunned Italian troops and fortifications in Abyssinia, in the Chelga and Bahrdar districts.

[An Associated Press dispatch said the possibility that the present Axis comeback might develop into a push against Sidi Barrani, about 50 miles from the Egyptian-Libyan frontier, was not ruled out by British authorities. They indicated, however, that the present Axis force is far inferior in strength to the Italians of last September, who with four or five divisions at their command pushed beyond Salum to Sidi Barrani. From that point the British launched their winter offensive that carried them beyond Bengasi, Libya.]

(Both Berlin and Rome claimed defeat of new British tank and infantry sorties out of the East Libyan port of Tobruk, 90 miles west of the Libyan-Egyptian border, where the British force has been resisting siege for a fortnight. The Italian high command admitted a British raid on Bengasi and announced 101 persons were killed and about 300 wounded in last Monday's British naval bombardment of Tripoli.)

Swastika on Acropolis

By the Associated Press

Berlin, April 27.—Adolf Hitler's legions swept southward into the Peloponnesus, the last tip of unoccupied Greek territory, in pursuit of remnants of defeated Greek and British forces today after planting the swastika atop the Acropolis, crumbling fortress of ancient Athens.

Beating down desperately resisting Allied rearguards, the spearhead of Nazi armored forces rolled triumphantly into Athens at 9:25 a. m. (1:25 a. m., E. S. T.), just three weeks and four hours after launching their Balkan blitzkrieg against Greece and the already vanquished Yugoslavia.

Thus was accomplished the occupation of the eighth European capital to fall to German arms after opposition.

Few details of the occupation were made public here outside the communique, but press accounts said Athens had not been subjected to assault. The nearby port of Piraeus was bombed, these reports said, because English, Australian and New Zealand troops had attempted to embark there.

City Receives Nazis in Silence

Correspondents of D. N. B., German official news agency, said Greek civilians received the Nazis in silence while Germans who had remained in Athens greeted them tumultuously.

German parachutists and S. S. elite Hitler bodyguard already had stormed across water barriers into the two north corners of the Peloponnesus in what appeared to be a fast developing pincers movement to snap off the last trace of resistance in the lower peninsula.

In the northwest corner of the Peloponnesus, Hitler's special S. S. bodyguard drove across the narrows between the Gulfs of Patron and Corinth. Then they fought their way into Patras, much bombed chief seaport on the western coast of Greece. Many British were declared captured in the Peloponnesus.

In the northeastern corner of the Peloponnesus daring parachute troops yesterday came into action for the first time in the Balkan campaign, apparently to circumvent the obstacles presented by the narrow, 4-mile long canal across the Isthmus of Corinth. There was only one bridge spanning a deep cut of the canal and this undoubtedly had been blown up by the Allies.

Oft-Conquered Athens Greets Germans 'With Stoic Smile'

By Nikos Kyriakidis
United Press Staff Writer

Athens, April 27.—Adolf Hitler's green-gray conquerors occupied ancient Athens today.

Those who remained of the city's 700,000 persons greeted the advance guard of the Nazis panzer forces with proud calm as they rode in a mechanized victory parade past the temples of Athenian glory that have stood since centuries before Christ.

The last of Britain's imperial troops had gone, after a valiant rearguard battle against overpowering odds, and the people had been told to meet the Nazi conquerors "as a people before whose eyes the invaders pass and fade away."

"Athenians will meet the Nazi army with a stoic smile upon their lips, knowing that everything passes away," newspapers told them.

Hitler's conquest of Athens, knocking Greece out of the war on the European Continent after a valiant six-month struggle that began last October 28 when Italy's armies attempted to invade the nation, was carried out methodically beneath a brilliant Sunday sun without a show of resistance in the city itself.

(The foregoing was filed from Athens after the arrival of the German troops, and the following portion of the dispatch was sent from Athens in the early morning hours of Sunday before the German advance forces appeared.)

The people, who had bade farewell to the departing British with shouts of "we'll see you again soon," waited silently behind locked justify and shuttered windows during the night, knowing that the Text of Churchill Broadcast Thanking U. S. for Patrol and Hinting War May Spread

By the Associated Press

London, April 27.—The text of Prime Minister Churchill's speech tonight follows:

I was asked last week whether I was aware of some uneasiness which it was said existed in the country on account of the gravity, as it was described, of the war situation.

So I thought it would be a good thing to go and see for myself what this uneasiness amounted to.

I went to some of our great cities and seaports which have been most heavily bombed and to some of the places where the poorest people have got it worst.

I have come back not only reassured but refreshed. To leave the offices in Whitehall with their ceaseless hum activity and stress and go out to the front, by which I mean the streets and wharves of London, Liverpool, Manchester, Cardiff, Swansea or Bristol, is like going out of a hothouse on to the bridge of a fighting ship.

It is a tonic I should recommend to any who are suffering from fretfulness to take in strong doses when they have need of it. It is quite true I have seen many painful scenes of havoc and fine buildings and acres of cottage homes blasted into rubble and heaps of ruins, but it is just in those very places where the malice of the savage enemy has done its worst and where the ordeal of men, women and children has been most severe that I found their morale most high and splendid.

Indeed I feel encompassed by an exaltation of spirit in the people which seems to lift mankind and its troubles above level material facts—indeed that joyous serenity we think belongs to a better world than this.

Of their kindness to me I cannot speak because I never sought it or dreamt of it and can never deserve it. I can only assure you that I and my colleagues, or comrades rather, for that is what they are, will toil with every scrap of life and strength according to the lights that are granted to us, not to fail these people or be wholly unworthy of their faithful and generous regard.

Vindication of Way of Life

The British nation is stirred and moved as it never has been at any time in its long, eventful and famous history and it is no hackneyed figure of speech to say they mean to conquer or die.

What a triumph life in these battered cities is over the worst that fire and bomb can do! What vindication of the civilized and decent way of living we have been trying to work for and work towards in our island!

What a proof of fortitude of free institutions! What a test of the quality of our local authorities and of the customs and societies so sturdily built!

This ordeal by fire is in a certain sense even exhilarating the manhood and womanhood of Britain.

The sublime but also terrible experiences and emotions of the battlefield which for centuries have been reserved for soldiers and sailors now are shared for good or ill by the entire population. All are proud to be under the fire of the enemy.

Old men, little children, the crippled, the veterans of former wars, aged women, the ordinary hardpressed citizen or subject of the King as he likes to call himself, the sturdy workman with his hammer in shipyard, skilled craftsman, members of every kind of A. R. P. service, are proud to feel that they stand in line together with our fighting men, when one of the greatest causes is being fought out, as fought out it will be to the end.

This indeed is a grand and heroic period in our history and the light of glory shines upon all.

You may imagine how deeply I feel my own responsibility towards all these people, my responsibility to bear my part in bringing them safely out this long, stern, scowling valley through which we are marching and not to demand of them that their sacrifices should be in vain.

Small Forces in Libya

I have thought in this difficult period when so much fighting and so many critical and complicated maneuvers are going on that it has been imperative that our policy and conduct should be upon the highest level and that honor should be our guide.

Very few people realize how small were the forces with which Gen. Wavell—that fine commander whom we cheered in good days and will back through bad—how small were the forces which took the bulk of the Italian masses in Libya prisoners. In none of his successive victories could Gen. Wavell maintain in the desert or bring into action at one time more than two divisions or about 30,000 men.

When we reached Bengasi and what was left of Mussolini's legions had scurried back along the dusty road to Tripoli, a call was made upon us which we could not resist.

Let me tell you about that call. You will remember how in November the Italian dictator fell upon unoffending Greeks and without reason and warning invaded their country and how the Greek nation reviving their classic faith hurled his armies back at double quick.

Meanwhile, Hitler, who had been creeping and worming his way steadily forward, doping and poisoning and pinioning one after another Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria, suddenly made it clear he would come to the rescue of his fellow criminal.

Lack of unity among the Balkan states had enabled him to build up a mighty army in their midst. While nearly all the Greek troops were busy beating Italians, the tremendous German military machine suddenly towered up on their other frontier.

In their mortal peril the Greeks turned to us for succor. Strained as were our resources we could not say them nay.

By solemn guarantee, given before the war, Britain had promised them her help. They declared that they would fight for their native soil, even if neither of their neighbors made common cause with them, and even if we left them to their fate.

But we could not do that. There are rules against that kind of thing, and to break those rules would be fatal to the honor of the British Empire, without which we could neither hope nor deserve to win this hard war.

Fortunes Are Fickle

Military defeat or miscalculation can be repaired. The fortunes of war are fickle and changing, but an act of shame would deprive us of the respect we now enjoy throughout the world.

And this would sap the vitals of our strength. During the last year we gained by our bearing and conduct a potent hold upon the sentiments of the people of the United States. Never, never in our long history have we been held in such admiration and regard across the Atlantic Ocean.

In that great republic, now in much travail and stress of soul, it is customary to use all the many varied and solid arguments about American interests and American safety which depend upon the destruction of Hitler and his foul gang and even fouler doctrines.

But in the long run, believe me, for I know, the action of the United States will be dictated not by a methodical calculation of profit and loss but by moral sentiments and by that gleaning flash of resolve which lifts the hearts of men and nations and springs from the spiritual foundations of human life itself.

Bound to Hearken

We for our part were, of course, bound to hearken to the Greek appeal to the utmost limits of our strength.

We put the case to the Dominions of Australia and New Zealand and their governments, without in any way ignoring the hazards, told us they felt the same as we did. So an important part of mobile portions of the Army of the Nile was sent to Greece in fulfillment of our pledge.

It happened that the divisions available and best suited to this task were from New Zealand and Australia and that only half of the troops who took part in this dangerous expedition came from the mother country.

I see that German propaganda is trying to make bad blood between us and Australia by making out that we have used them to do what we would not have asked of the British army.

I shall leave it to Australia to deal with that taunt. Let us see what has happened. We know of course that the forces we could send to Greece would not by themselves alone be sufficient to stem the German tide of invasion but there was a very real hope that the neighbors of Greece would by our intervention be drawn to stand in line together with her while time remained.

How nearly that came off will be known some day. The tragedy of Yugoslavia has been that this brave people had a government which hoped to purchase an ignoble immunity by submission to the Nazi will.

Thus, when at last the people of Yugoslavia found out where they were being taken and rose in one spontaneous surge of revolt, they saved the soul and future of their country but it was already too late to save its territory. They had no time to mobilize their armies but were struck down by the ruthless and highly mechanized Huns' armies before they could ever bring their armies into the field.

Great disasters have occurred in the Balkans. Yugoslavia has been beaten down. Only in the mountains can she continue her resistance. The Greeks have been overwhelmed.

Fighting Back to Sea

Their victorious Albanian army has been cut off and forced to surrender and it has been left to the Anzacs and their British comrades to fight their way back to the sea, leaving their mark on all who hindered them.

I turn aside to indulge for a moment in a little light relief. I dare say you read in the newspapers that by special proclamation the Italian dictator has congratulated the Italian army in Albania on the glorious laurels they gained by the victory over the Greeks.

Here surely is a world's record in the domain of the ridiculous and contemptible.

This whipped jackal, Mussolini, who to save his own skin made all Italy a vassal state to Hitler, comes frisking up at the side of the German tiger with yelps not only of appetite—but even of triumph.

Different things strike different people different ways but I am sure there are a great many millions in the British Empire and the United States who will find a new object in life in making sure that when we come to final reckoning this absurd imposter shall be abandoned to public justice and universal scorn.

While these grievous events were taking place in the Balkan peninsula and in Greece our forces in Libya have sustained a vexatious and damaging defeat. The Germans advanced sooner and in greater strength than we or our generals expected. The bulk of our armored troops which played such a decisive part in beating the Italians had to be refitted and the single armed brigade which had been judged sufficient to hold the frontier until about the middle of May was worsted and its vehicles largely destroyed by a somewhat stronger German force.

Our infantry, which did not exceed one division had to fall back upon the very large imperial armies that had been assembled and can be nourished and maintained in the fertile delta of the Nile. The fortress of Tobruk, which flanks any German advance on Egypt, we hold strongly.

There we have repulsed many attacks, causing immense losses and taking many prisoners.

That is how the matter stands in Libya and on the Egyptian front. We must now expect the war in the Mediterranean, on the sea, in the desert and, above all, in the air, to become very fierce, varied and widespread.

We have cleaned the Italians out of Cirenaica and it now lies with us to purge that province of Germans. That will be a harder task and we cannot expect to do it at once. You know I never try to make out that defeats are victories. I have never underrated the German as a warrior; indeed, I told you a month ago that the swift, unbroken course of victories we had gained over the Italians could not possibly continue and that misfortunes must be expected.

There is only one thing certain about war—that it is full of disappointments and also full of mistakes.

It remains to be seen, however, whether it is the Germans who made mistakes in tramping down the Balkans and making a river of blood between themselves and the Greek and Yugoslav peoples.

It remains also to be seen whether they made a mistake in their attempt to invade Egypt with the forces and means of supply which they now have got.

Taught by experience I make it a rule not to prophesy about battles which have yet to be fought.

This, however, I will venture say, that I should be very sorry to see the task of the combatants in Middle East exchanged and for Gen. Wavell's armies to be in the position of the German invaders. That is only a personal opinion. I can well understand there may be different views.

May Attack Ukraine

It is certain that fresh dangers besides those which threatened Egypt may come upon us in the Mediterranean. The war may spread to Spain and Morocco. It may spread eastward to Turkey and Russia

The Germans may lay their hands for a time upon wheat lands of the Ukraine and oil fields of the Caucasus.

They may dominate the Black Sea. They may dominate the Caspian. Who can tell?

We shall do our best to meet them and fight them wherever they go. But there is one thing which is certain. There is one thing which rises out of the vast whirlpool which is very sure and solid and which no one in his senses can mistake. Hitler cannot find safety from avenging justice in the East, Middle East or Far East.

In order to win this war he must either conquer this island by invasion or he must cut the ocean lifeline which joins us to the United States.

Britain Stronger

Let us look into these alternatives, if you will bear with me for a few minutes longer.

When I spoke to you early in February many people believed the Nazi boastings that invasion of Britain was about to begin. It has not yet begun and with every week that passes we grow stronger on the sea, in the air and in the numbers, quality, training nad equipment of the great armies that now guard our island.

When I compare the position at home as it is today with what it was in the summer last year, even after making allowances for such a much more elaborate mechanical preparation on the part of enemy, I feel that we have very much to be thankful for and I believe that, providing our exertions and our vigilance are not relaxed even for a moment, we may be confident we shall give very good account of ourselves.

More than that it would be boastful to say. Less than that it would be foolish to believe. But how about our lifeline across the Atlantic? What is to happen if so many of our merchant ships are sunk that we cannot bring in the food we need to nourish our brave people?

What if supplies of war materials and war weapons which the United States is seeking to send us in such enormous quantities should in large part be sunk under water? What is to happen then?

In February, as you may remember, that bad man in one of his raving outbursts threatened us with a terrifying increase in numbers and activities of his U-boats and in his air attacks not only on our ports but, thanks to the use of French and Norwegian harbors and thanks to the denial to us of Irish bases, to fall upon our shipping far out into the Atlantic.

We have taken and are taking all possible measures to meet these deadly attacks and we are now fighting against them with all our might and main. That is what is called the Battle of the Atlantic, which, in order to survive, we have got to win on salt water just as decisively as we did win the Battle of Britain last August and September in the air.

Wonderful exertions have been made by the men who build and repair our immense fleet of merchant ships and by the men who load them and unload them, and need I say by the officers and men of the merchant navy who go out in all weathers and in the teeth of all dangers to fight for the love of their native land and for a cause they comprehend and serve.

Easy to Sink, Hard to Build

Still, when you think how easy it is to sink ships at sea and how hard it is to build and protect them, and when you remember that there never are less than 2,000 ships afloat and never less than 300 or 400 in the danger zone and of world-wide traffic we have to carry on, can you wonder that it is the Battle of the Atlantic which holds first place in thoughts of those upon whom rests the responsibility for procuring the victory.

It therefore was with indescribable relief that I learned of the tremendous decisions lately taken by the President and people of the United States.

The American fleet and flying boats have been ordered to patrol the wide waters of the Western Hemisphere and to warn peaceful shipping of all nations outside the combat zone of the presence of lurking U-boats or cruisers belonging to two aggressive nations.

We British will therefore begin to concentrate our protecting forces far more upon the routes near their home and to take far heavier toll of U-boats there.

Great Legislation

I have felt for some time that something like this was bound to happen. The President and the Congress of the United States, having duly fortified themselves by contact with their electors, have solemnly pledged their aid to Britain in this war because they deem our cause just and because they know their own interests and safety could not but be endangered if we were destroyed.

They are taxing themselves heavily. They have passed great legislation. They have turned a large part of their gigantic industry to make munitions which we need. They even have given us and lent us weapons, valuable weapons of their own. I could not believe that they would allow the high purposes to which they have set themselves to be frustrated and the product of their skill and labor sunk to the bottom of the sea by a U-boat warfare that is conducted by Germany entirely contrary to an international agreement freely subscribed to by Germany only a few years ago.

More Favorable Phase

There is no effective blockade, only merciless murder and marauding over wide and indiscriminate areas utterly beyond control of the German sea power.

When I said ten weeks ago "give us the tools and we will finish the job" I meant give them to us, put them within our reach, and that is what it now seems Americans are going to do and that is why I feel a very strong conviction that though the battle of the Atlantic will be long and hard and its issue by no means yet determined it has entered upon a more grim but at the same time a far more favorable phase.

When you come to think of it the United States is very closely bound up with us now and have engaged themselves deeply in giving us moral, material and, within limits I have mentioned, naval support.

It is just worth while, therefore, taking a look on both sides of the ocean at forces which are facing each other, in this awful struggle from which there can be no drawing back.

No prudent and far-seeing man can doubt that eventual and total defeat of Hitler and Mussolini is certain in view of the respective and clear resolve of the British and American democracies. There are less than 70,000,000 malignant Huns, some of whom are curable and others killable; most of whom already have engaged in holding back the Austrians, Czechs, Poles and many other ancient races they now bully and pillage.

Two Hundred Millions

The people of the British Empire and the United States number nearly 200,000,000 in their homelands and in British dominions alone. They possess the unchallengable command of the oceans and will soon obtain decisive superiority in the air.

They are getting more and more technical resources and are making more steel than the rest of the world put together. They are determined that the cause of freedom shall not be trampled down nor that the tide of world progress shall be turned back by the criminal dictators.

While we view with sorrow and anxiety much that is happening in Europe and Africa and in Asia, we must not lose our sense of proportion and thus become discouraged or alarmed. When we face with a set eye the difficulties which lie before us, we may derive new confidence by remembering those we have already overcome.

Nothing that is happening now is comparable with the dangers through which we passed last year; nothing which can happen in the east is comparable with what is happening in the west.

In Poet's Words

The last time I spoke to you I quoted the lines of Longfellow which President Roosevelt had written down for me in his own hand.

I have some other lines less well known but which seem apt and precious to our thoughts tonight. I believe they will be so judged wherever the English language is spoken or the flag of freedom flies:

"For while the tired waves, vainly breaking seem here no painful inch to gain
Far back through creeks and inlets making comes silent flooding in the main.
And not by eastern windows only, when daylight comes . . . Comes in the light
In front the sun climbs slow, how slowly, but westward, look, the land is bright."

Churchill Pauses for Grim Laugh At 'Whipped Jackal, Mussolini'

No matter how somber a picture of Britain's war plight Winston Churchill has to paint, as he did yesterday, he usually finds a grim humor in his evaluations of Benito Mussolini's role in the war.

Yesterday's contribution on this point was all the more sardonically amusing because of the tones with which Churchill recited this estimate of the Duce:

"I turn aside to indulge for a moment in a little light relief. I dare say you read in the newspapers that by special proclamation the Italian Dictator has congratulated the Italian Army in Albania on the glorious laurels they gained by the victory over the Greeks.

"Here surely is world's record in the domain of the ridiculous and contemptible.

"This whipped jackal Mussolini, who to save his own skin made all Italy a vassal state to Hitler, comes frisking up to the side of the German tiger with yelps not only of appetite—that could be understood—but even of triumph.

"Different things strike different people different ways but I am sure there are great many millions in the British Empire and the United States who will find a new object in life in making sure that when we come to final reckoning this absurd imposter shall be abandoned to public justice and universal scorn."

English City Gets Terrific Blasting As Churchill Talks

A South Coast Area of England (Monday), April 28 (AP).—German air raiders starting their attack during the broadcast by Prime Minister Churchill inflicted one of the worst attacks of the war on this region last night and early today.

The Nazis dropped many incendiaries and followed them with unusually heavy explosive bombs.

Business and residential sections of a city in this area were badly damaged. There was an undetermined number of casualties.

Workers began digging in the ruins as the raid was nearing its end. The bombers flew over the area in successive waves for three hours.

One of the first enemy planes to arrive was shot down in flames. A second German bomber was reported brought down in other raids on widespread sections of Britain.

Hindsight and Foresight—

An Inventor... An Agent A Successful Business

In a recent editorial in Forbes Magazine, Mr. Forbes points out that life insurance is a "great provider of jobs—greater than the mightiest of our industrial corporations."

He illustrates by citing the huge sums life insurance invests in industry, and by telling how life insurance protection often helps a business to keep going which might otherwise be forced to liquidate at the death of a key personality.

Here is another way in which life insurance provides jobs—a case where it helped to start a business that is particularly valuable at the moment.

Because the man involved prefers to remain anonymous, I am changing both his name and two minor details—Mr. Brown is the inventor of a machine tool used in perfecting interchangeable parts for intricate machines. Some years ago, while working for a big manufacturer, he decided to go into business for himself. His employer urged him to do so and promised him substantial orders. If he could raise $65,000 to build and equip a plant, he could be fairly sure of success.

He knew, of course, that it was strictly a businessman's venture—only for those who understood the risks and could invest their own money. Yet even with such men, his efforts to raise money struck a snag. Due to the highly specialized nature of his product, he himself was essential to the business. If he died, the business might well die, too.

At this point, a life insurance agent came forward and suggested that he insure his life for $65,000 on behalf of his stockholders. This he did . . . and the result is a successful business, small, but so important that it is now working three shifts a day, seven days a week, to help eliminate a "bottleneck" in our national defense.

'Don't Limit Aid, Rockefeller Urges

New York, April 27 (AP).—John D. Rockefeller declared today it was his "firm conviction, arrived at in anguish of spirit" that the people of the United States and all the Americas "should stand by the British Empire to the limit and at any cost."

Calling for the American people to stand solidly behind President Roosevelt and to see that quantities of war munitions sufficient to win victory were "laid down at Britain's door," Rockefeller, who has one son, Winthrop, in the Army, said the issue being fought was freedom versus slavery and added:

"I would rather die fighting the brutal, barbarous, inhuman force represented by Hitlerism than live in a world which is dominated by that force."

His views were given in a letter to Arthur Hays Sulzberger, publisher of The New York Times. Rockefeller himself made public the letter.

Rockefeller asserted that it was not enough merely to fabricate munitions of war and to supply needed foodstuffs—that these were all "valueless unless laid down at Britain's door."

Douglas Favors Convoys

Meanwhile, Lewis W. Douglas, chairman of the national policy board of the Committee to Defend America by aiding the Allies, declared himself in favor of convoying American supplies to Great Britain.

Characterizing the loss of Allied merchant shipping as "alarming, even ominous," Douglas admitted, in a statement issued through national headquarters of the committee, that convoying would involve great risk.

But, he added, the risks are "incalculably less than by indolently, fearfully, cravenly waiting until we shall stand without a friend on earth, in desperate solitude."

"We can turn out of our factories planes, tanks and guns and all the implements of war," he asserted. "We can load them into ships, but they must reach England and her armies at the front if they are to be useful. We can insure their arrival by protecting them, by protecting the ships carrying the supplies, either by using the convoy method or any method that is found to be most effective."

The text of Rockefeller's letter follows:

"Dear Mr. Sulzberger:

"You and I have had several talks during recent months regarding the relations of the Americas to the European war. There are certain definite conclusions which I have now reached. May I state them briefly.

"Let me say at the outset that, like most people, I hate war. All my life I have hated it. I have always preferred the ways of peace and have followed them wherever possible. But when all peaceful methods have failed and the issue was worth standing for at any price, even if it meant a fight, I have never hesitated to see it through on that basis.

"Don't Count Cost"

"That is my position regarding the present conflict. It is my firm conviction, arrived at in anguish of spirit, that the people of the United States and of all the Americas should see this conflict through; that we should stand by the British Empire to the limit and at any cost.

"The issue that is being fought out is simple and clear cut. Shall free men live under the laws of their own making and under leaders of their own choosing, or shall human beings exist as slaves under the lash of the tyrant while all that makes life worth living, and even life itself, are subject to the whim of the oppressor?

"I am convinced that force can never be permanently subdued by force, that hate cannot annihilate hate nor evil drive out evil. Nevertheless, for myself, and I say it deliberately, I would rather die fighting the brutal, barbarous, inhuman force represented by Hitlerism than live in a world which is dominated by that force. It is because I believe the same is true of an overwhelming number of Americans that I say, we of the Americas should stand by the British Empire to the limit and at any cost.

"It is not only to fabricate the munitions of war in adequate variety and overwhelming quantity or to provide the raw materials needed and the foodstuffs required—they are all valueless unless laid down at Britain's door. How that can best be done, it is the responsibility of the President and his military advisers to determine. I firmly believe that prompt and effective action on his part only awaits the assurance of general public support of such means as it may be necessary to adopt for the accomplishment of that end.

Cites Essentials

"To provide in adequate quantity and lay down at Britain's door the munitions of war required, to insure her successful issue from this conflict, two things are absolutely essential:

"1. On the part of the citizenry generally, a united public opinion solidly behind the President in whatever may be necessary to achieve the desired end.

"2. On the part of industry and labor, a united determination to keep the wheels of industry running at top speed and highest productive capacity, thus eliminating during the period of the emergency all strikes, lockouts, labor disputes and stoppages of every character." Confident that, to some extent at least, recent industrial disputes have been due to Fifth Column activities, Nazi or Communist, it is my belief that the country will support the President solidly in adopting immediately the fullest measure to free industry and labor from such subversive and anti-American influences and handicaps.

"The magnificent tenacity and unparalleled courage of the English nation must be reinforced by our fullest aid. Every hour is precious. We must act today. God grant that as those who come after us read the history of this fateful hour, they may have occasion to give humble thanks for the stand this day taken by all those who proudly call themselves Americans!

"Very sincerely,

"JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR."

Germans Near Dardanelles, Russians Told

By the Associated Press

Moscow, April 27.—Red Star, organ of the Soviet army, reported for the first time today the German occupations of the Greek Islands of Samothrake and Lemnos, near the Dardanelles entrance to the Black Sea, and described this as part of "widespread action" in the Aegean.

Referring to Lemnos, the newspaper said, "This island, 60 kilometers (about 38 miles from the exit of the Dardanelles' has great strategic importance."

Red Star failed to throw any light on the Soviet government's attitude toward the German occupation. (Russia has fought several wars to keep the Dardanelles, guardian sentinel of her Black Sea outlet, out of the hands of a dominating European power.)

Simultaneously it was reported that Red Army engineers have pitched camp in the Odessa military district adjoining the Balkans for a training period—the first mention here of Soviet spring exercises on the Black Sea.

A bulletin published in Red Star said the engineers would practice problems in river crossing, including bridge-building and ferry movements, scouting, minelaying and camouflage.

Red Fleet, organ of the Soviet navy, discussing the British position in the western Mediterranean at Gibraltar said "it hardly is possible to take such a fortress by sea."

Gibraltar, it asserted, is vulnerable by land but contended that the Spanish and French governments were "influenced by the presence there" of the British fleet and air force.

next few hours would bring the sounds of German troops.

Until the last a valiant rearguard force of British imperial troops—Englishmen, Australians and New Zealanders—had stood, a mere handful of defenders, against the German tide some miles north of the city, covering an orderly evacuation.

The streets, where Socrates once preached and Demosthenes exalted freedom and the soul of man, were deserted during the night under a strictly enforced curfew.

The city of Athens has been captured many times down through the ages, its most famous conqueror being Xerxes in 480 B. C. However, his fleet was defeated by the Greeks shortly after the city's fall and he was forced to retire to Persia with his armies.

The last radio proclamation to the people Saturday night had told them that "the struggle is of limited duration now," although it spoke proudly of the last-ditch stand being made by the British Imperials on 4,627-foot Mount Kitheron, 25 miles northwest of Athens, where they obstinately batted the German attempts to sweep down along a side road leading to the capital from Thebes.

Mysterious Broadcast

[An Associated Press dispatch told of a mysterious broadcast from Athens by a woman identifying herself as an American war correspondent. She said British troops were evacuating Greece "in hundreds and thousands of little gasoline ships and sailboats which for many years have been the livelihood of Greece."]

Early today a series of royal decrees from King George and the government in exile on the British-defended Island of Crete, were published in Athens, naming a new governor general for the Greek islands of the Aegean which have not been seized by the Germans.

Pericles Argyropoulos, formerly of the foreign ministry, was named governor general of the islands and Premier Emmanuel Tsouderos became temporary war minister.

Alien Ship Seized By Soviet Patrol

Moscow, April 27 (AP).—An unidentified foreign ship which entered Russian waters without permission was reported today to have been captured by a Soviet patrol boat.

A dispatch in Komsomol Pravda, newspaper of the Communist Youth League, said the ship was detected during a storm and that it tried to escape by ramming the patrol boat but was boarded by Soviet sailors and seized after a scuffle with the crew. The location of the incident was not given.

Great Convoy Of Canadians Crosses Safely

By the Associated Press

A British Port, April 27.—Thousands of Canadian fighting men and the largest force of Canadian-trained imperial fliers yet to reach the United Kingdom have arrived from Canada to take their posts in the war against Germany.

Arrival of the heavily guarded convoy was announced after the troops had taken trains to their new stations and the convoy was dispersed.

The cheering soldiers said the crossing was "quiet and dull" with not one U-boat or hostile aircraft being sighted during the entire voyage.

The British said this marked another successful convoy job by the navy without the loss of a single life due to enemy action.

Americans Included

Canadians, New Zealanders, Australians, Britons and a scattering of Americans were included in the air force detail in the convoy. The Americans were said to have volunteered for air transport and Auxiliary uties.

The aviators and soldiers streamed ashore from the transports, singing and cheering and jostling each other as they piled up dunnage and bags on the docks.

Many crowded around newsmen who boarded the liners and inquired about the latest war news.

Among the airmen trained in the empire training camps built in Canada were officer pilots, air gunners, ground crews, observers, wireless operators and a group of radio signal officers.

The soldiers included engineers, artillerymen, and other reinforcements for Canadian units already in the United Kingdom.

There also were some naval men to reinforce units in service in British waters.

Armored Corps, Too

The first representative group from the Canadian armored corps and another Canadian engineer road construction unit with its own steam rollers and tractors also crossed in the convoy.

Meanwhile, important changes in the high command of Canadian troops in the United Kingdom, making the Canadian corps general staff completely Canadian, were disclosed today.

Brig. E. L. M. Burns, of Ottowa, prepared to take over the duties of Brig. M. C. Dempsey as brigadier of the general staff handling all military operations of the overseas army.

Brig. G. R. Turner, of Fredericton, N. B., has been promoted to succeed Brigadier C. A. P. Murison as deputy adjutant and quartermaster general.

Atlantic Fleet Augmented For Patrols

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Staff Writer

Disclosure that patrol operations of the Atlantic fleet have been greatly extended indicated yesterday that the United States has concentrated a large number of small war vessels along the Eastern Seaboard in recent months.

Craft described by naval experts as most useful in patrol work include destroyers, submarine chasers, the heavier types of reconditioned yachts, mine-layers and minesweepers and, functioning in conjunction with these, long-range airplanes. Light cruisers also are sometimes employed on such an assignment.

The Navy has been building such craft in increasing quantities, and in informed quarters here it was believed that most of them have gone to the Atlantic rather than the Pacific Fleet. Moreover, some authorities suggested that any vessels which could be spared from Pacific duty probably have been put to work in the Atlantic.

When the neutrality patrol was first set up in the fall of 1939, the Atlantic Squadron, as it was then known, numbered about 125 vessels. Informed opinion now is that it includes more than 200, at the very least, and that most of these are operating in waters off New England and Canada, where run Britain's principal supply routes from this country.

The first neutrality patrol area in the North Atlantic extended from a point south of Canada's vital port of Halifax out about 125 miles to the sixtieth degree of longitude and south along that longitude to near the northern coast of South America. The area was less than half that now believed to be under surveillance.

Establishment of America's defenses in Greenland of itself extended United States naval lines across a whole new section of the Atlantic. President Roosevelt's Friday press conference report that the patrol would operate as far out in the Atlantic as necessary to protect American defenses was interpreted as indicating that all along the eastern coast the original outer limit of operations may have been moved eastward from the sixtieth latitude nearer the fiftieth and in some cases even the fortieth meridian, which is the approximate midway point to Europe.

Mr. Roosevelt contended that there was a vast difference between patrolling and convoying and denied emphatically that any convoying was being done by United States ships.

Other authorities professed to see in the move, however, a maneuver of considerable benefit to Britain since her navy would be relieved of the necessity of convoying in the western Atlantic to the extent that those waters are made safe for her ships.

Greek Minister Will Attend Ball

The Greek Minister, Cimon Diamantopoulos, announced yesterday that he and members of the legation staff will attend a Greek war relief ball May 21 in Springfield, Mass.

Superbombs Rock Hamburg 'Like Volcano'

By the Associated Press

London, April 27.—The R. A. F. dumped cargoes of Britain's powerful new bombs on Hamburg, Germany's biggest port and second city, last night in a raid which one pilot said left a half-mile area "a huge, heaving mass like a volcanic eruption."

The air ministry said an assault almost as violent was made on the big German shipbuilding yards at Bremerhaven and that other R. A. F. units pounded Emden and Cuxhaven in Germany, Le Havre, France, and Ijmuiden, the Netherlands.

"Berlin, Kiel and Bremen already have left the force of our latest and most powerful bombs," the air ministry said. "Now Hamburg has experienced the devastation which they can cause."

One participating pilot brought back this account:

"I had with me one of the powerful bombs, and after it burst I could see a circle of red and on the rim of it, quite a distance from the center, I saw buildings going up in the air.

"Although I have been on 31 raids I have never seen anything to match the effect of this bomb."

Other pilots said the big bombs caused raging fires elsewhere in Hamburg, sending huge clouds of black smoke billowing upward.

The air ministry said German night fighters tried to intercept the R. A. F. bombers but presented no great obstacle.

The Germans themselves concentrated Saturday night's attack on the Merseyside area of Liverpool. The government announced there were a few killed and some damage. This assault was described as "not on a very heavy scale."

Twenty-seven babies escaped without a scratch when a nurses' home in a northwest coastal town sustained a direct hit. Three of the eight nurses were killed.

(The Germans said provision wharves at Liverpool were their major target.)

One German bomber appeared over the southeast coast today, but turned back into the clouds, followed by R. A. F. fighters.

The air ministry reported that at least one of four ships attacked by the R. A. F. off the coast of Norway and the Frisian Islands yesterday was sunk and another badly damaged. Antiaircraft ships near the coasts were strafed.

A British pilot diving to within 100 yards of a Nazi airdrome in Norway, between Bergen and Sund, was credited with destroying two German planes attempting to take off. Others were claimed damaged by machine-gun fire.

were taken by these forces, the Germans announced.

While the Germans pressed hard on the heels of the withdrawing Allies, Stuka dive-bombers made it hot for the British escaping by sea.

The high command announced one British cruiser was sunk, two cruisers damaged, four transports totaling 22,000 tons and a merchantman of 5,000 tons sunk and 20 other ships totaling 155,000 tons damaged in Greek waters yesterday and today.

Additional accounts, announced by the German radio, said three merchant ships aggregating 27,000 tons were sunk and two others damaged by the Luftwaffe pouncing relentlessly on the embarking British Expeditionary Force yesterday.

Intensification of the new sea warfare in the Atlantic and around the British Isles also was announced, the high command claiming that submarines sank five merchantmen totaling 39,148 tons in the Atlantic with Nazi airmen accounting for two more freighters and a destroyer and damage to a third merchantman in English waters yesterday.

Rome Warns Swiss to Be 'Careful'

Rome, April 27 (U.P.).—The Italian radio tonight unleashed its strongest attack thus far on Switzerland, warning the tiny Alpine nation that its "existence" will be jeopardized unless it maintains strict neutrality.

"The Swiss must not forget that if they continue to eat in will be due to Italy's benevolence," said Enzio Gray, national councilor, speaking from the Rome radio.

"Before the restrictions were applied on the entry of foreigners into Italy 14,000 Swiss came to Italy. When they returned to Switzerland they reported to authorities on what they had seen and learned during their stay.

"Absolute neutrality is the only reason which can justify the existence of the Swiss Republic. But the majority of the Swiss press is paid by Britsh Jewry and serves British interests . . . Locarno has become a center of espionage . . . Switzerland must be careful."

ween that portion of the Appalachian coal region which lies principally in the western portion of Pennsylvania, eastern Ohio and the northern part of West Virginia, on the one hand, and that portion of the Appalachian region which lies principally in the southern portion of West Virginia, eastern Kentucky and portions of northern Tennessee and western Virginia, on the other hand.

"The United Mine Workers and the operators in the northerly portion of the Appalachian region have accepted without reservation the President's proposal. The operators in the southerly portion of the Appalachian region have not accepted it. They have not at any time been willing to agree that wages fixed by future negotiation be made retroactive to the date of resuming work. Many formulas have been discussed.

"The last offer of those who have not agreed to the President's proposal was to fix their wage scale now on the basis of an addition of $1 to the daily wage and a properly related percentage increase in other wage rates, wages not to be subject to further negotiation, and the contract to run to March 31, 1943. This offer as made did not directly mention the differential.

"The effect of it was that elimination of the differential could be brought about only if the mine workers would surrender 40 cents of the $1 increase to which the operators in the northern portion of the Appalachian region had agreed. This offer was rejected.

"After the most careful consideration, the panel is unable to recommend this offer as a substitute for the President's proposal.

"The panel, therefore, unanimously recommends that the President's proposal as made on April 21, as quoted above, be accepted today by the miners and all operators in order that production of coal essential to the national defense may begin on Monday, April 28, 1941."

L. Ebersole Gaines, chairman of the Southern coal operators wage conference, issued a statement later contending that a Southern proposal, embodying a wage increase, which he said would aggregate $50,000,000 a year, "would have reopened the mines tomorrow." He added that "it now appears doubtful that any settlement . . . can be anticipated immediately."

Charles F. O'Neil, chairman of the Northern operators' wage conference negotiating committee, said, "We accepted the President's proposal in New York. We also accepted the Mediation Board's proposal."

Lewis, president of the mine workers, commented afterwards that "we have again accepted the recommendations of another government agency."

"We first accepted the Department of Labor proposal," he continued, "then we accepted the President's proposal and again today we accepted the Mediation Board's proposal. Our attitude is surely self-explanatory all the way through. I might recall that these gentlemen who rejected the proposal today had conducted a 13-day campaign to try to get this dispute referred to the National Mediation Board. It was their court."

Reflecting the growing official and Congressional concern over curtailment of steel, railroad and other activities because of coal shortages, Senator Truman declared his committee would seek to find out "why we can't get coal."

Official reports last week showed that while the steel industry recently was operating at 95 per cent of capacity, the production has fallen to about 85 per cent, with indications that if the tieup continues another week it will be down to 60 per cent.

What action President Roosevelt might take was a matter of speculation, most of which centered on the possibility of his invoking a section of the Selective Service Act authorizing him to take over and operate any plants or industries failing to cooperate in the defense effort. Such action was not expected immediately, however.

Yesterday's session of the board panel was marked by banishing from the building in which the sessions were held, of Edward F. Jones, who up to Saturday night had been employed in a public relations capacity by the Southern operators.

While the board panel and participants in the dispute had agreed that no public statements should be issued while the negotiations were in progress, Jones, who later said he was not familiar with the agreement, issued a statement to newspapermen that the negotiations had reached a point of collapse. The statement outlined three proposals which Jones said had been made by the Southerners but rejected by the Northerners and union men.

Hearing of the statement, Chairman Davis called Jones into the conference, where he was questioned and then ordered to leave the Social Security Building. The Southern operators said Jones no longer was employed by them.

Ormondroyd Dies; Treasury Employe

Ezra Ormondroyd, 59, veteran of 25 years' service with the Treasury Department, died yesterday at his home, 320 Decatur Street Northwest. He was found unconscious in a chair by his wife, Alva, and pronounced dead of a heart attack by a Casualty Hospital ambulance doctor.

police, he shot Mrs. Robertson once at close range.

According to Sergt. Bodmer Thompson declared Robertson had then said "you shot my wife but you didn't even do a good job of it. Shoot me again." Whereupon Thompson then shot Robertson again, police said.

Law officers were notified of the two shootings by a telephone call from the arrested man himself, they said.

Arriving at the scene they found Dewey Thompson standing in the front yard of his home, they said. A neighbor had taken the 12-gauge shotgun from him. At the time of the slaying, police said last night, both the suspect's father and 81-year-old mother Katherine, were in the house.

Dewey Thompson, Sergt. Bodmer said last night, is the brother of Vernon Thompson, last man to be hanged in the Rockville jail yard, "more than 20 years ago." The executed man, the sergeant said, was convicted of dynamiting a neighbors' home and killing "one or more persons."

Earlier in the program, Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese Ambassador, made a brief speech of thanks to the Washington Committee for United China Relief for sponsoring the program, and to the audience, which paid up to $25 per seat to swell the relief fund. Also introduced was Dr. Quo Tai-chai, newly appointed Chinese foreign minister, who is en route from London to Chungking. Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox was chairman of the evening.

Roosevelt Against Parity Increase

Thursday is expected to vote to send to the floor the Vinson bill which would require, among other things, a 25-day "cooling off" period before work stoppages can be made effective in defense plants.

Indications were that this bill, toward which the Administration has displayed a distinct coolness, could not be brought to the floor before next week. The House calendar calls for consideration today of bills affecting the District of Columbia, to be followed tomorrow probably with a relatively minor agriculture bill, and on Wednesday with the 1942 Interior Department appropriations bill, which is expected to consume the remainder of the week on the House floor.

The explosive issue of American convoys for ships carrying lend-lease products to Britain also is to be raised again Wednesday when the Senate Foreign Relations Committee acts on the measure by Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, to forbid use of convoys. Administration forces have insisted that it would be defeated.

Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O., asked defeat of the Vinson bill in a statement yesterday. He said that a compulsory 25-day "cooling off" period before strikes "will definitely destroy the right to strike."

In addition, if completed and given right-of-way by the Rules Committee, the Bland Bill to give the Administration authority to requisition and pay for immobilized foreign shipping in American ports, including the 39 Danish ships now held in protective custody, will be put ahead of the Vinson "cooling off" labor controversy bill, probably being slated for consideration on May 5.

Representative Carl Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, sponsor of that bill, which seeks among other things to give legislative backing to the Mediation Board's efforts, plans to bring before his group today another proposal having a similar objective, to the extent that it would give legal powers not now possessed to the Office of Production Management in its control of priorities for strategic materials needed in the defense industries. William S. Knudsen, director general of the OPM is expected to testify before the committee in favor of this proposal.

Bodies of Sisters, 10 and 12, Found

Montgomery, Ala., April 27 (AP).—Bodies of two little sisters, who disappeared a week ago, were found in the Alabama River today.

Dr. S. E. Centerfit, who supervised autopsies, said he believed the children were dead when placed in the river, "because of the condition of their lungs, which still had air in them, and because their hair was full of cockleburrs, indicating they had been dragged." Neither had been attacked, he added, and no broken bones were found.

The sisters were Euline Hicks, 12, and Juanita Hicks, 10, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hicks. They sent their books to school Monday by a playmate with a request that she tell the teacher they had gone to a clinic to be examined.

The bodies were found by Maxwell Field soldiers searching for the body of a private who drowned Thursday.

Nazis Deny Consuls Aided Flier's Escape

The German Embassy last night denied that German consular officers had "encouraged and abetted" Baron Franz von Werra, Nazi war flier, in jumping his bond and fleeing this country, as was charged Saturday by Attorney General Jackson.

Jackson, speaking at Richmond, Va., had said Justice Department officials "have positive evidence" of the connivance and assistance and added that the consular officials' action "has not been disavowed to this date by their country."

The German Embassy issued this statement, as if in reply:

"Concerning the case of Lieut. Baron von Werra:

"1. Under international law an escaped prisoner of war has the choice (a) to leave the neutral country into which he escaped and into which he was admitted; (b) to accept a residence for the duration of hostilities if the receiving neutral state agrees to his sojourn.

"2. Immigration laws of neutral states cannot be held applicable in cases of escaped prisoners of war.

"3. This notwithstanding, bail was set in the case of Lieut. Baron von Werra in order to insure his departure from this country.

"4. Lieut Baron von Werra was not under parole. Making use of his privileges under international law, he therefore chose to leave this country. He acted entirely on his own responsibility without informing the competent consular authorities.

"5. Lieut Baron von Werra apparently made his departure from the United States on the same day on which it was reported by the press that two German naval officers who had escaped from a prisoner of war camp in Canada to neutral United States territory were returned to Canadian authorities."

Bright Lights Switched Off For 'Boo-Boo' Hoff

Philadelphia, April 27 (AP).—Max "Boo Boo" Hoff, 48, one of the prohibition era's "big shots" and nationally known a decade ago, was found dead today in his West Philadelphia home.

The body of the man, who in 1928 during a grand jury investigation was characterized as "king of the bootleggers," was discovered by his wife on the floor beside his bed. On a bedside table was a glass of water and some sleeping tablets. An autopsy will be performed tomorrow.

During his fabulous career Hoff was a boxing manager and promoter and operated a number of night clubs at various times. At the height of the prohibition era Hoff's wealth was estimated between $2,000,000 and $5,000,000.

No Sham Peace For Britain, Says Jewish Leader

Syracuse, N. Y., April 27.—The chairman of the British section of the World Jewish Congress asserted today Britain "will not be guilty of the betrayal of civilization by making a sham peace" which, he said, "internatoinal busybodies and appeasers" are promoting in every great neutral capital.

"The people of Britain," Dr. Maurice L. Perlzweig, London, told the twelfth convention of the National Federation of Jewish Men's Clubs, "have come to the conviction that life without liberty is not worth living. The millons of ordinary folk have decided, each for himself, that it is better to be dead than a slave."

Dr. Perlzweig, who arrived in this country several weeks ago, said persistent attempts which have been made to induce the British to accept peace "are now growing in volume and insistence."

5,000 Attend 'Valley Day'

By the Associated Press

Fort George G. Meade, Md., April 27.—More than 5,000 people today attended the "at home" activities of Virginia's 116th Infantry Regiment at "Valley Day."

Features of the day, in honor of the Shenandoah Valley, included a parade by the 1,500 men of the regiment, boxing and other athletic contests and religious services conducted by Senior Chaplain William Francis Burke in the chapel.

An estimated 600 guests had their noon meal in the men's and officers' messes.

Guests of Col. E. W. Opie, commanding officer, were Maj. George A. Cottrell, City Manager W. A. Hall and C. K. Brown, editor, all of Staunton, Va., and the former commanding officer of the regiment's C Company, Capt. William Myers, of Harrisonburg, Va.

A 45-minute concert was given in the regimental area before the parade by a boy's band, led by five high-stepping majorettes, from Harrisonburg, and under direction of Joe Wampler. The regimental band gave a concert earlier today.

Yesterday athletic contests were held by the "stay-at-home" regiment and the first dance (and first official program arranged by the Twenty-ninth Division hostesses) was held in the new Division Service Club.

Scientists and Decorators Will Meet Here

A variety of expositions, ranging from the "methods of excitation of melanophores in the skin of the catfish ameiurus" to the price of groceries, and interior decorating, will be heard in Washington this week at meetings of learned, commercial and esthetic groups.

Hotels, crowded to capacity as they were for the Cherry Blossom festival, were thronged with delegates to the various meetings.

Leading decorators, including Joseph Platt, of New York, who designed the stage sets for "Gone With the Wind," will attend the American Institute of Decorators' quarterly board meeting here today, through Wednesday, at the Shoreham Hotel. Nathan Straus, Federal Housing administrator, will address the group at today's afternoon session.

The National Academy of Sciences annual meeting opens at 10:15 a. m. today at the National Academy of Sciences Building, 2101 Constitution Avenue.

Speakers will include A. B. Wyse and N. U. Mayall, of Lick Observatory, on the subject "Distribution of Mass in the Spiral Nebulae Messier 31 and 33." On Tuesday morning, H. J. Muller, of Edinburgh University, will discuss "The Role Played by Radiation Mutations in Mankind." G. H. Parker, of Harvard University, will discuss "The Methods of Excitation of Melanophores in the Skin of the Catfish Ameiurus," and H. S. Burr, of Yale University, will speak on "Field Properties of the Developing Frog's Egg."

Then the American Geophysical Union will open its twenty-second annual meeting Wednesday and continue through Saturday, with sessions in the National Academy and Research Council Building, the Departmental Auditorium, Constitution Avenue between Twelfth and Fourteenth Streets, and the North Interior Department auditorium. Opening sessions will revolve around terrestrial magnetism, volcanology and hydrology discussions.

The twenty-fourth annual meeting of the American Council on Education will be held Friday and Saturday at the Mayflower Hotel. George F. Zook, president, will give his annual report at 10 a. m. Friday. Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard University, will discuss British universities in the war crisis Friday afternoon.

Mathematical Society

The American Mathematical Society will hold its 379th meeting at George Washington University Friday and Saturday. Members will discuss "The Method of the Minimum Integral and the Analytic Continuation of Functions" at 10 a. m. Friday, along with other matters.

The price of groceries, dry goods and clothing will be considered by the Defense Conference on Consumer Goods at the Commerce Department Wednesday with public morning and evening sessions. The afternoon program will be closed to the public, "as it has been found by experience that manufacturers and processors will not talk freely at open meetings," the Department's announcement said.

Hotels Are Crowded With Convention Delegates

The larger hotels were getting a reminder of the now waning cherry blossoms yesterday, through the overflow extent of their patronage.

The tourist crowds that besieged the hotels for rooms over the Easter-cherry blossom weekend changed to convention-delegate crowds yesterday and another hunt for rooms is in progress.

The Shoreham Hotel described the rush as "terrific." The Mayflower Hotel said it had been doing capacity business since the Easter weekend; the Washington Hotel said it has been refusing reservations for a week; the Willard Hotel said it would be filled after today; the Carlton said it is filled through Friday and the Wardman Park Hotel said its reservations were running heavy.

Navy Harassing B.E.F., Nazis Say

Berlin, April 27 (AP).—Units of the German fleet are in the eastern Mediterranean harassing British efforts to deliver the expeditionary force out of Greece, D. N. B., German news agency, reported tonight.

Nazi Canard, Australians Say, Denying Disunity With Britain

The Australian government and Labor Party yesterday joined in branding as "intense German propaganda" reports that disunity was occurring between Australia and England.

The statements, signed by A. W. Fadden, the acting prime minister, and John Curtin, leader of the opposition and leader of the Australian Labor Party, were received here by the Australian Minister, R. G. Casey.

"Australia to a man stands solidly behind Great Britain in this war," Fadden's statement reads. "The Australian people were proud to be associated with British and Greek troops in the Balkan sector of the war. Even if this particular military operation does not bring the success we would have liked it to bring, it cannot be emphasized too strongly that Australia is fighting this war as one of an empire team.

"At present there is an intense German propaganda drive in progress in which an attempt is being made to tell German people and neutral countries that trouble has arisen between Great Britain and Australia . . . It is an untrue statement."

Curtin said "there is no political disunity in Australia about the prosecution of the war. On the contrary, Australians face it as a united and determined people and although criticism and expressions of opinion are free here, this should not be mistaken as any evidence of doubt. There never has been nor should there be any doubt about Australia.

"As leader of the Australian Labor Party, I say to our enemies that the workers of this country are determined to give their all in the war that has been forced upon us. To the United States I say that the labor movement of Australia will be unflinching and unyielding to the end, for we have a common interest and a common fate in resisting any aggression.

Parliament will meet in Australia early in May "to decide how best we can make a greater war effort than anything we have hitherto achieved," Fadden said.

Melbourne, April 27 (AP).—John Curtin, Australian labor leader, said in an interview today en route to Canberra for a meeting of the Australian war council that the Axis had made fullest use of a controversy in Australia last week over the sending of Australian troops to the Balkans without the consent of the war council.

He said the Berlin radio had seized upon "mischievous and unwarranted" statements made in the Japanese press that the Australian attitude was a sign that the British Empire was crumbling.

He declared that as leader of the Australian Labor Party he knew that "Australian workers and other Australians are united in their determination to give their all in a war which has been forced upon us."

More Defense Strikes Stayed By U. S. Board

The National Defense Mediation Board chalked up further success yesterday in its efforts to prevent defense-crippling labor stoppages, despite the setback encountered in the coal strike.

Harmonious developments, reported by the Associated Press, included these:

A board formula for settling the 13-day-old strike at the Buffalo (N. Y.) plant of the American Car & Foundry Co., making shells for the United States and Britain, was accepted by C. I. O. and A. F. L. unions, both of which claim a majority of the plant's 1,500 employes.

The California Metal Trades Associatoin announced virtual settlement of a 21-day strike of machinists which had involved 64 shops and $27,500,000 in defense orders in the San Francisco area. The dispute had been before the board last week, but hearings were adjourned when it appeared that a settlement could be reached by direct negotiations.

A strike at the Fairfield Aviation Corporation plant, Queens, N. Y., which has $21,000,000 in defense orders, was averted yesterday when J. S. Ogsbury, company president, and C. I. O. union representatives reached an agreement after conferring for three days with Federal conciliators.

Details of the agreement will be disclosed when 400 workers, members of Local 121 of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers accept the terms.

The United Auto Workers International Board, C. I. O., yesterday in Detroit, upheld the action of negotiators in deferring a strike at request of the Mediation Board and declared it welcomed intervention by the board, which has set hearings for Friday.

U. S. Will Seek to Increase Supply, Fix Prices as Needed

Leon Henderson, administrator of price and civilian supply, last night declared his office will place greater emphasis on increasing the supply of goods as a means of averting inflation and, when this move falls short, price ceilings would be established.

In an exposition of his program before the American Forum of the Air, broadcast Nation-wide via WOL, Henderson said:

"This means expanding plant facilities. It means more subcontracting to little shops. It means putting all of our unemployed to work. It means training more skilled labor. It means increasing necessary imports from foreign countries."

Thus far, defense spending has been carried out "with but a small increase in price level," the price administrator asserted, mainly because the supply of civilian goods has kept in step with the increased demand created by the defense jobs and wages.

When the supply-demand balance was upset, then the Government stepped in and set price ceilings for steel, soft coal, scrap iron, scrap zinc and scrap aluminum; retarded price rises in lumber, copper and farm implements, Henderson said.

Senator Robert Taft (Republican), of Ohio, charged that expansion of nondefense goods factories would result in an intensified postwar depression. Henderson countered that the billions being spent for war goods could just as well be spent for civil goods after the war.

After challenging the Government's right to fix prices and indulging in a lively argument with Henderson on this point, Taft stated he would favor price fixing after it had been approved and limited by Congress.

Best method of fighting inflation, Senator Taft said, is through "reducing the artificial purchasing power," by heavy taxation, such as the recent 3½ billion levy proposed on Capitol Hill.

Taft also urged a vigorous baby bond campaign, cutting down of nondefense expenditures by the Government, limiting of private credit expansion, and "elimination of the President's power to issue greenbacks and silver certificates and his power to devalue the dollar."

Also participating in the forum were Ralph Hetzel, jr., director of the C. I. O.'s unemployment and economic divisions, and Noel Sargent, secretary of the National Association of Manufacturers. They debated principally over the question whether or not wage increases necessarily increase prices.

Hetzel insisted that defense activities increased production and thus lowered production costs and swelled margin of profit. The increased wages could come out of the increased profit without affecting prices, he argued. Sargent offered contrasting statistics to show that production costs had gone up, and that higher wages means higher prices.

"I TALKED WITH GOD"

(Yes I Did - Actually and Literally)

and as a result of that little talk with God, a strange Power came into my life. After 42 years of horrible, dismal, sickening failure, everything took on a brighter hue. It's fascinating to talk with God, and it can be done very easily once you learn the secret. And when you do—well—there will come into your life the same dynamic Power which came into mine. The shackles of defeat and fear which bound me for years, went a-shimmering—and now?—well, I own control of the largest afternoon daily newspaper in North Idaho. I own the largest office building in my City. I drive two beautiful cars, I own my own home which has a lovely pipe-organ in it, and my family are abundantly provided for after I'm gone. And all this has been made possible because, one day, about twelve years ago, I actually and literally talked with God.

You too may experience that strange mystical Power which comes from talking with God, and when you do, if there is poverty, unrest, unhappiness, ill-health, or material lack in your life, well—this same Power is able to do for you what it did for me. No matter how useless or how helpless your life seems to be—all this can be changed. For this is not a human power I'm talking about—it's a God-Power. And there are no limitations to the God-Power, are there? Of course not. You probably would like to know how you, too, may talk with God, so that this same Power which brought these good things to me, might come into your life too. I have written the strange, almost unbelievable story in two booklets, and I have given away literally millions of copies of them. As a matter of fact, the story has been told in 67 foreign countries, and in every city, town, village and hamlet in America. It has been written up by such outstanding periodicals as Time, Newsweek, Magazine Digest, and scores of other internationally-known publications.

I want to give you these two booklets. I want to give you also illustrated circulars, and copies of letters which tell what is being accomplished all over the world through this new strange Teaching. If you will send me your name and address on a post-card or in a letter, these two booklets will come to you free of charge. This experience may sound unbelievable, but it's true or I wouldn't tell you it was. The address is Dr. Frank B. Robinson, Dept. 883, Moscow, Idaho.

THERE'S REAL POWER HERE

In this, darkest hour in world history, when the very foundations of peace and freedom are threatened by the most inhuman brutality this world has ever known, Almighty God has seen fit to reveal to the world, through the "Psychiana" Movement, the plain simple truths of God. These staggering truths have not been revealed before. This is an utterly new conception of God. It is now possible for all men to draw upon the actual and literal Power of the Spirit of God, and that Great Spirit is unfailingly responding to the simple desires of the human heart. Now, at long last, the plain simple truths of God are really being revealed to the human race. No theological creeds, dogmas, or beliefs are necessary. Any man or woman anywhere, can now know the Actual Power of the Spirit of God to the very full. The Power can supply you every need, be that need material or spiritual. It is this Power which will banish all dictators. This is a non-profit religious corporation. It is revealing God to Man. Advt. Copyright 1941, Psychiana, Inc., Moscow, Idaho.

If not, NOW is the time to Act!

THE German war-machine is within reach of completing the conquest of Europe. It is about to crush the last of the nations whose leaders cared too little and too late. It is nosing into the Near East. Unless checked it will be but a matter of time until it commands the West Coast of Africa within striking distance of South America. If England falls the Nazi warlords will be in a position to seek mastery of the seven seas. The declared goal of the aggressors is to dominate the world and enslave the democracies. Hour by hour, the battle line of civilization is moving toward us.

Because we realize this we have sent the following telegram to every Senator and Congressman:

"Hitler has declared war on democracies. We are at war now. The purposes of the lend-lease act can no longer be made effective. Catastrophe is at our door. We believe this country must now declare a state of national emergency which shall include use of our armed forces under our own flag to control the whole North Atlantic area, the severance of diplomatic relations with the aggressor nations, the apprehension of fifth columnists, the convoy of food and materials to the fighting forces of democracy, the use of the American navy and air force under our own command, and the full use of the power and majesty of the U. S. to preserve the freedom of the U. S. and of freemen everywhere who are fighting for us."

ALL OVER THE WORLD DEMOCRACIES ARE DYING BECAUSE OF THEIR INABILITY TO ACT FAST. LET US PROVE THAT WHEN THE MOMENT COMES AMERICA CAN ACT FAST THROUGH THE DEMOCRATIC PROCESS OF MAKING THE VOICES OF ITS CITIZENS HEARD.

House to Hear 'Taxpayers' On Levy Rise

The House Ways and Means Committee having received from Treasury and Congressional experts widely differing formulas for raising the $3,600,000,000 to be added to the Federal tax burden is scheduled to hear today the first four witnesses representing taxpaying groups. They include M. L. Seidman, chairman of the taxation committee of the New York board of Trade; Thomas M. Bullick, banker, of Richmond, Va.; William J. Scheiffelin jr., chairman of the committee on taxation of the New York chamber of commerce, and John W. Lawrence, general manager of the American Trucking Association, Inc.

This group is to be followed by other spokesmen for the taxpaying public during the week.

Meanwhile, Washington friends of Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee which will handle the tax legislation in the Senate, learned that while Harrison is showing "marked improvement" at the Army and Navy Hospital, Hot Springs, Ark., where he has been resting and taking the baths following a physical check-up, the Mississippian will not return to the Capital in time to conduct the tax hearings on the Senate side.

A statement from the hospital received here said:

"Senator Harrison will continue his rest elsewhere after his discharge from the hospital soon. He has shown marked improvement and soon will be released from medical supervision here, where he has been undergoing a medical survey and taking the mineral baths." The Senator's condition upon admission was said to have been "primarily one of fatigue."

The statement was accompanied by one from Harrison saying he would continue his rest at the doctor's orders "until I have sufficiently recovered to resume my duties."

While expressing disappointment that he would be unable to handle the tax bill, he said he had conferred, before leaving Washington, with Senator George, ranking majority member of the committee, with Chairman Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, and others, and that "the measure will be in fine hands." He added that "I am relying on my friends in Congress to cary on for me in my absence."

Elephant vs. Man Battle Ends in Draw

BEAST FELLS KEEPER—With what appears to be a sly grin, Ziggie, a 6-ton elephant in the Brookfield Zoo, Chicago, pins his keeper to the ground between his tusks. Seconds later, Lewis struggled upward far enough to smack Ziggie in the eye with his fist. The elephant in turn raised up a bit and Lewis rolled free, suffering a few minor bruises. Ziggie then was given a big meal in order, zoo officials said, to "cool him off"

D. C. Saengerbund Marks 90th Year at Concert

By Ray C. B. Brown

Washington Saengerbund gives a concert Sunday afternoon in the Willard Hotel ballroom, assisted by the Saengerbund Frauenchor and the Gesangverein Arion from Brooklyn, N. Y. Directors: Herbert K. Herzfeld and Herbert Fiss.

With a just pride in its record as one of the oldest musical organizations in the National Capital, the Washington Saengerbund celebrated its 90th anniversary yesterday afternoon at a concert in the Willard Hotel ballroom. Assisting in the program were the women's chorus affiliated with the Saengerbund and the Gesangverein Arion which had come from Brooklyn, N. Y., for the occasion. On the podium for the local singers was the latest and youngest of the succession of directors, Herbert K. Herzfeld, while the visiting group was led by Herbert Fiss.

BROWN

Like its kindred societies throughout the United States, the Washington Saenberbund has preserved and perpetuated the traditions of German folksong, one of the richest treasuries of national music, which has provided material for uncounted symphonies and other major works since the days of Sebastian Bach. What began as an expression of nostalgia among the immigrants to a new country has been continued by their descendants with an affection for the songs of their forefathers.

In the Saengerbund's opening group were three of these folksongs: "Evening Bells," "Now, Farewell, My Beloved Homeland," and "Heart's Sorrow." With them were combined two songs in folk-style: Silcher's "Wohin met der Freude" and Baumann's "Awakening of the Forest." All were sung with a robust and well-blended harmony.

The women's chorus, after singing Mozart's "Auf der Andacht heil'gem Fluegel" and Lendval's "Eidechslein," presented five lieder by Brahms: "Minnelied," "The Mountains," "Now the Roses Are Blooming," "The Bride" and "The Bridegroom." The two groups joined as a supporting chorus for Virginia Gilbert Elliott, who sang the soprano aria, "Inflammatus," from Rossini's "Stabat Mater."

The Gesangverein Arion offered Kempf's "Rhine Wine," Geibel's "March Onward" and "Dear Land of Home," arranged from Sibelius' "Finlandia." The program closed with Cadman's "Glory" and Kreutzer's "The Lord's Day," sung by the visitors and their hosts.

Washington College of Music presents William Holden in a piano recital Sunday afternoon in the Sulgrave Club. Program of music by Mozart, Brahms, Liszt, MacDowell, Chanler and Griffes.

William Holden, resident pianist and faculty member of the Washington College of Music, gave his annual recital yesterday afternoon in the Sulgrave Club, with a large and friendly audience in attendance. A serious and ambitious young musician, he has shown a consistent idealism in his work and a growing surety in his technical mastery. His playing has clarity and precision, and on the side of interpretation there is evidence of his studious application.

The first part of his program was in the path of recital tradition, including Mozart's B flat sonata, and three pieces by Brahms; the B minor rhapsody, the E flat minor intermezzo and the D minor capride. Into his Liszt group he brought the relatively unfamiliar "Il Penseroso" from "The Years of Pilgrimage" and the A flat major waltz impromptu in the company of two of the Paganini transcriptions; the one in E flat major (Andantino Capriccioso) and the one in E major (La Chasse).

His final group was devoted to American composers. Edward MacDowell came first with the "Novellette," from the virtuoso etudes; the contemporary composer. Theodore Chanley was represented by three short pieces, and the recital closed with the scherzo by the late Charles T. Griffes.

One would suggest that this was too scant recognition of native talent. One would like to hear from Mr. Holden an entire recital of American music, for it is to our young musicians that we should be able to look for the performance of compositions neglected because of adherence to a convention of program-making.

Business In Conference

Our all-out defense effort depends so much upon the cooperation of business managements that the twenty-ninth annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce which begins in Washington today is vested with transcending importance. Happily the businessmen are foregathering in a better attitude of mind toward the Administration. A number of high officials of the Government will be present as speakers, and the theme of discussion "What's Ahead for America?" testifies to a high sense of responsibility for the national program, no less than for the problems of post-war reconstruction.

The betterment in relations between Government and business does not mean that Government officials and businessmen are in complete agreement as to the proper limits of Government authority over business enterprise. But it does mean that nowadays there is a general recognition that wholehearted cooperation between business and Government is essential in the present emergency. Hence, as was to have been expected, the scheduled speeches and conferences of the C. of C. meeting are concerned with problems of defense as they affect business. Apart from information as to what is actually being done to further defense, a wide range of topics is listed, such as labor relations, transportation by land, sea and air, foreign trade, agricultural problems, etc.

Undoubtedly many more questions will be asked than answered during the four days allotted to discussion. But that does not matter. The chief value of these annual meetings of the Nation's businessmen lies in the opportunities which these gatherings offer to relate experiences, swap ideas, and (especially important) gain a better understanding of the general as distinct from the individual problems of business enterprise. That larger understanding is essential to the efficient functioning of an industrial system based upon individual initiative. Under normal conditions it is the best possible safeguard against the encroachment of Government controls upon the private business domain. And even under the abnormal conditions of the present time, the more businessmen know about the general problems of industry, the less need there will be for the Government to tell them what to do and how to do it. We offer our good wishes for such a successful meeting that the members will go back to their plants inspired to make a maximum contribution to the national cause.

Why Surtaxes?

When is a surtax not a surtax? The question is squarely raised by the Treasury's designation of recommended increases in individual and corporate income taxes as surtaxes. Proposed individual tax increases would apply to all persons now subject to income taxation. One would, therefore, have expected the Treasury to ask for an increase in the normal individual tax rate as well as higher surtax rates. Instead the normal tax rate would remain the same under the Treasury's program, with increases taking the form of graduated "surtaxes" applicable to all taxable income.

Take, for example, the case of corporations. The suggested 6 per cent "surtax" (5 per cent in some cases) on corporate earnings is really nothing but an addition to the existing 24 per cent normal corporate income tax. Why, then, should the proposed new taxes be called surtaxes? The explanation is simple: at present banks and other corporations with large investments in Government bonds entirely escape payment of taxes on income from Government bonds. For these are exempt from the corporate normal tax, even though they are subject to payment of surtaxes. Thus by a change of nomenclature the Treasury hopes to get at the income from partially tax-exempt securities of this kind. By labeling the new taxes "surtaxes" it will be able to levy a 6 per cent income tax upon returns from holdings hitherto tax free.

The Treasury estimates that about $20,000,000,000 of such partially exempt securities are owned by private corporations. "When these securities were purchased," Mr. Sullivan told the Ways and Means Committee, "it was not anticipated, either by the Government or by corporations, that the tax benefit from them would be as great as it is. It is undesirable, therefore, that any additional tax benefit be granted by increasing the normal rate on corporations."

Nevertheless, the Government pledged the buyers of those securities valuable tax-exemption privileges which it is under a moral obligation to respect. For this reason the new scheme which has been devised to get at income hitherto exempt is a sharp device. In the case of corporate holders of bonds in particular, certainly, it will be impossible to justify, and will result in charges of bad faith being brought against the Government by its creditors. The additional revenue that might be secured by such means would be obtained at great sacrifice if it caused investors to distrust the promises of their Government and resulted in impeding the sale of future issues of Government bonds.

Churchill Reports

Mr. Churchill in his address to the world yesterday made a shrewd thrust at American defeatism by telling from actual experience how the will-to-win is fiercest in the towns and areas which have been damaged most by the Nazi Luftwaffe. No disheartenment, no appeasement, can be found there. Uprooted out of their homes, the little people of Britain are more determined than ever to conquer or die. Truly the "light of glory is upon them." The spectacle of their resolve filled Mr. Churchill, as it must have filled his American listeners, with humility; it inspired him, as it must have inspired his American listeners, to pledge this dauntless people his maximum effort to sustain their magnificent defense.

About the Mediterranean front, whence are coming such bad tidings, Mr. Churchill spoke with that attention to realities which the poet says is the beginning of wisdom. In honor bound to support Greece, the British could not go back on their promise, despite the weakening of their North African position which such an adventure entailed. It was a pity that in the early days of the intervention this moral aspect of the expedition was overshadowed by military expectations. For the distorted view of the chances of establishing a Balkan front for an attack on Germany which emanated from London has accentuated the defeatism in America. However, when the historian comes to sum up the expedition, he may conclude that the British reaped honors as well as honor out of it. Mr. Churchill dismissed with the contempt it deserved the Nazi effort to sow dissension between Britain and Australia. It is said that the British sacrificed the Anzacs rather than the British. Australians are too full of common sense not to see in these charges the same kind of Nazi trick which a year ago widened the rift between the French and their British allies. There was only one omission in Mr. Churchill's Mediterranean survey, the country which has been criticized for not supporting Greece. There was no reference to Turkey. Turkey, if it had gone to Greece's support, might well have invited the same debacle as the French suffered in leaving their prepared positions, and going into Belgium. It might have been just and politic, perhaps, of Mr. Churchill to have said a passing word in Turkey's behalf, for the Turks now are standing in the path of the Nazi juggernaut.

In this part of the speech there was some preparation for further bad news from the Mediterranean. But Mr. Churchill helped to restore a perspective by stressing the fact that victory or defeat does not lie in the Mediterranean. It lies in the Atlantic. Hitler in order to win must either beat Britain at home or destroy her communications with America. In this theater of the Atlantic we ourselves have just assumed new patrol responsibilities corresponding to our vital interests which Mr. Churchill hailed with "indescribable relief." We must see to it that, at whatever risk, the British navy is further sustained in guarding this precious line of communications, if our patrols don't reduce the shipping losses. Mr. Churchill himself hinted that patrolling might not be enough. In that event we must give (in the sense of convey or convoy) Britain the tools with which to keep up her indomitable fighting, and not subject ourselves to the bankruptcy of our own lend-lease policy by seeing the products of our arsenal consigned by Nazi submarines to Davy Jones' locker. Mr. Churchill's translation across the seas of the magic unconquerability of the British spirit will renew American faith that in so giving America would be giving for victory.

District Appeals

In an appeal to the Supreme Court the District has begun the final effort to collect, under the existing income-tax law, its governmental share of the highest per capita income in the country. If the decision of the United States Court of Appeals is allowed to stand, nothing further can be done, without legislation, to levy on the salaries of persons who live here but claim domicile in the States. The District also will continue to labor under difficulties in tracking down any residents who use the excuse of domicile and the loopholes of the present law to avoid paying taxes either here or "back home." Thousands will proceed in their enjoyment of municipal services paid for by their neighbors. But, at least, if the Supreme Court upholds the Court of Appeals, the issue will have been made unmistakable. It will then be possible to ask Congress, which already this year has ducked amendments to tighten up the District's revenue-finding regulations, whether we must go ahead with an unfair and demonstrably unworkable law.

Common Policy

The recommendations regarding the disposition of idle foreign shipping in ports of the Western Hemisphere which the Inter-American Financial and Economic Advisory Committee approved unanimously on Saturday should help bring to an end an awkward and anomalous situation. Since the present war began more than 5,000,000 tons of British, Allied and neutral merchant shipping have been sent to the bottom by German U-boats, bombing planes and mines. Not only has this created a very acute problem for Great Britain, which now finds herself face to face with the possibility of having her vital supply lines cut, but it has also brought in its wake a serious situation for the nations of Latin America. A very large part of the commerce of these nations is normally carried in foreign bottoms, and the shortage of shipping, consequently, creates a serious bottleneck for them. Yet the ships belonging to Axis powers and nations overrun by the Axis are tied up in ports of the Western Hemisphere.

Recently the United States took over German and Italian vessels in our harbors on the ground that acts of sabotage had been or were about to be committed against them. But until now no uniform policy regarding this problem has been agreed on by the 21 American republics. Some, like Mexico and Chile, have followed our lead. Others, notably Argentina and Brazil, have hesitated to do so. Recently, Uruguay suggested a statement of common Pan-American policy toward the seizure of belligerent vessels in American waters. This action the Inter-American Financial and Economic Advisory Committee has now taken. It has recommended to the governments of the American republics that "they declare that the foreign flag vessels in American ports, the normal commercial activities of which have been interrupted as a consequence of war, may now be utilized by the American republics" in accordance with international law and domestic legislation of the respective nations. "Just and adequate compensation" for the utilization of these vessels is suggested. Finally, the committee would have the American republics "reaffirm their full right to the free navigation of those vessels, both in their national and international trade, once they are under the flag of any one of the American republics. . . ." By formulating a common rule of action broad enough to make possible action by each of the republics in line with its own needs and its own laws, the committee has done a real service to Pan Americanism.

For All Faiths

Ever and again in this peaceful hemisphere there are demonstrations of that good will among persons of varying beliefs which could take place in few other parts of this war-plagued world. To do its bit in continuing and fostering this spirit, the Brotherhood of the Washington Hebrew Congregation will hold on May 4 its father-and-son banquet. For the eighteenth consecutive year, parents and youths of all faiths will sit down to enjoy themselves together in a thoroughly American manner. The affair is primarily a fun-fest. There will be no long speeches, but there will be singing and dancing acts, figures from the world of sports, clowns, and even a lion tamer. And, indeed, we can think of no better way than in jollity to carry out the theme of the banquet, which is "The Boy, and Better Relationships Between the Different Faiths."

RAIN

She blackens the boles of maples
Already dull with grief
And deftly drops her tears on twigs
That once felt leaf.

Where are the deserts of autumn
The ghosts of crackling grain
Unsoothed by the slanting rhythm
Of the dancing rain?

Even the mallard gliding
Over a sunless lake
Finds thirsty peace in pecking clouds
That mirror and break.

The fallow heart no longer
Can bear this time of drouth
Without grey kisses of the rain
Upon the mouth.

America And The War

An American entry now into the war against Germany would win the fight Britain is losing.

Britain is fighting the Nazis for the freedom and dignity of man. But America no longer believes in the freedom and dignity of man—not so much as she believes in safety.

"Men die by fighting; nations die by yielding," said the hero Simovich. But America no longer believes in heroes—if her courage flags, how can that of others run high?

Under the democracy that a British and American victory would establish, individuals and states of individuals could strive of their own will toward the highest good, the betterment of mankind, the ideal of brotherly love which is democratic as much as Christian.

But America no longer believes in democracy—it owed her and the rest of the world a living in the last 20 years and didn't provide it.

America could win the war! But America is turning aside her head from the peoples who would welcome her arm against the Nazis and who would lend her theirs. She no longer believes in the things for which she has stood and to which she still gives lip service; if her people all live, why should not the spirit which gives her life die? America is poking her head in the sand, seeking safety for today, hoping that she will not feel tomorrow the prick of the Nazi sword on her unfeathered buttocks.

This is America today! If Americans think not, let them give the world proof!

Of Realism

In a speech recently at Salt Lake City, Senator Wheeler spoke of himself as a "realist." Yet he does not seem to realize that if Britain goes down, we are next on Hitler's list. He does not seem to realize that Hitler needs no "excuse" for invading a country, if he thinks it is the right time to invade. The Senator does not seem to realize that now, while Britain is still undefeated, Hitler would not declare war on us, no matter how far we went in our aid to Britain, for such a course would have a grave effect upon his own subject people.

Further, the Senator does not seem to realize that it is not the 22 miles of English Channel that counts, but the fact that Britain is an island and can be much more readily protected than our vast continent could be. It isn't the 3,000 miles of ocean that count. But the Senator does not realize that. He does not seem to realize any of the realities; but then he is a confirmed "isolationist," and that is being the most unrealistic type of person in the world.

Minority Rights

In a by-gone day of crisis a great patriot cried, "These are times that try men's souls." Dauntless champion of truth, Thomas Paine placed the blame where it rightfully belonged, upon events and uncontrollable circumstance, rather than upon their creatures and victims. Spiritually frustrated, almost a century and a half later, an immortal statesman laid the blame for his bitter disappointment and futile leadership upon miserable scapegoats of ridiculing fate. Woodrow Wilson, himself a helpless bit of flotsam, floundering in a tidal wave of political impotence, indicted his fellow victims of disaster in scathing rhetoric: "But the Senate was unable to act, because a little group of willful men, representing no opinion but their own, have determined that it shall not. They have rendered the great government of the United States, helpless and contemptible."

Once more history poses to repeat itself as our chastened vanity seeks its inevitable scapegoat. This time will it be, a little group of willful men?

Before we repeat this pattern of forensic folly, let us prayerfully meditate upon the legitimate role of minority dissent in the last stronghold of democracy.

This right of minority dissent is the very soul of democracy. We enjoy it only by the sufferance of those who have the sovereign power to enjoin it or revoke it at will. By means of it the rights of the weakest and the most miserable are protected and guaranteed against the tyranny or mass injustice of a dominant or insouciant majority. When it is surrendered or revoked, whatever its cause or justification, civil liberty ceases to be and the arbitrary rule of delegated authority begins its unpredictable sway and dominion. Wherever this has happened, either through malicious design or unavoidable circumstances, a dictatorship of human frailty has necessarily replaced the traditional rule of law. If this precious right of minority dissent is properly exercised within its ordained bounds of legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument, it stands in no jeopardy, but remains the bulwark of our constitutional heritage and the only surviving hope of democracy's eventual salvation.

These things being true, let him who perverts this sacred right and privilege of minority dissent, beware! What will it gain you to pull down the very temple of liberty for the cowardly glory of perishing beneath its very keystone? Your right to dissent is not the right to obstruct the sovereign will and purpose of the dominant majority! Neither is it the right to sabotage the very means by which your perfidious unfairness pleads the further indulgence of those whose hospitality you have betrayed! Do you think that democracy in its hour of gravest peril will hesitate to protect itself with every instinct and instrumentality of self-preservation?

Minority dissent is both a privilege and duty, but the preservation of democracy is a compulsion of a higher order. Let not the two come in conflict by Brother Dissenter, because regardless of which wins, democracy will perish! Search your soul my brother, and use minority dissent for its ordained purpose, the inalienable right of the majority to voice its sovereign will.

THOMAS E. MATTINGLY.

A Reader Addresses The President

My Dear Mr. President: You tell us that the country is not fully aware of the world crisis. We hope that the time has come when you will feel justified in taking us into your confidence so that we may get along with what has to be done. Letting the people catch up with you in their thinking may be good politics, but we do not wish to look to you as a good politician, but as a great leader.

"We, the People," have felt that our defense program has not gone ahead in a way commensurate with our potentialities. We have been distressed to hear and read the promises made to the fighting democracies in Europe and in the Orient because we know that these promises are not being fulfilled, nor can they be, until we go all-out for this aid, along with our own defense. Is there something wrong with the setup that holds us back from what we know we can do?

Moreover, Mr. President, we were told by the radio and the newspapers that the Congress, the voice of public opinion, was about to pass antistrike legislation when you came back from your vacation and advised against this action. We know that you have been and are the friend of labor, but we are asking ourselves if encouraging organized labor in its present course is an act of friendship. For one thing, they are alienating friends and accumulating a weight of public disapprobation. We know, as you do, that the mass of labor is patriotic and loyal; that it is more often than not the victim of unscrupulous organizers and agitators. We do question the Americanism of those leaders of the C. I. O. who are fomenting and fostering strikes in vital defense industries in perfect timing with the pleas of both Messrs. Hitler and Stalin. Furthermore, you know that no group of people has more at stake in this world conflict between totalitarianism and what we in America hold dear than has labor. In Germany the Nazi "elite" among the industrialists are piling up fabulous fortunes while the laborers are working when and where they are told to work, bitterly long hours, for slave wages. There is no place in Nazi Germany, in Fascist Italy, or in Communist Russia for organized labor. You know these things, Mr. President, and would you not be a better friend to those whom you have befriended if you protect them against those leaders who would lead them to ruin?

We have realized, belatedly, after the way of democracies, that Britain's security is our safeguard, and we believe, with no less conviction than you voice, that we must not fail to underwrite this security. Whatever be necessary to carry out the job we have to do, let us get on with it; more power to implement the work of those who are striving to rout out the 800 subversive organizations boring inside these United States; convoys; a declaration of war emergency, if need be. The dictators will not strike until they are ready no matter what we do; when they are ready, God help us if we still have done too little and acted too late.

We have given you a Congress, Mr. President, that is as a whole patriotic and intelligent. "We, the People"—even those who did not vote for you and who say with Mr. Willkie: "You are our President; that is enough"—are ready to follow great leadership. We are willing to endure sacrifices; we shall cheerfully pay the price in increased taxes that go into the security of freedom wherever men love and cherish liberty. Your opportunities are limitless.

We know you have promised to keep us out of war, as we had promised ourselves to stay out, but we know, too, that the sweep of world events is carrying us on beyond any limits of our own choosing. God knows we mothers want no war. But, if war be the only alternative to the future our children must endure in a totalitarian-dominated world, we shall face that, too.

The Post Impressionist

The Engagement

They always walked home from school together, taking the same route every day. It led them past the smart shops that lined the avenue, and then gradually the stores thinned out and made way for the large apartment houses of the residential section where Judie lived.

The avenue was nice today. The weather had turned warm and brought out smartly dressed women to stroll casually along the wide sidewalks. The store windows looked smarter, too, filled with the new spring clothes after the hiatus of winter.

Judie knew that she should be finding a particular enjoyment in the walk today. But there was something wrong. She had a feeling of urgency as if there were something she should be accomplishing and wasn't, something that had to be done on this walk. There was no reason for it. It was the same walk they always took; they were acting in the same way they always did. Nothing was changed.

That was the trouble—nothing was changed. She had been going with Carl for over a month now and nothing had happened. Oh, he'd told her that he loved her. Right at the beginning he'd told her that. Otherwise, she wouldn't have started going with him. She never went with boys who weren't in love with her. But after all, there was more than just saying he was in love with a girl that a boy was supposed to do—if he was serious. And Judie believed in being serious. Besides, she had broken her engagement to Harry to start going with Carl. She wouldn't ever have done so if she had known how long Carl was going to drag things out. She'd been a whole month now without being engaged. She didn't like it. And the girls at school were starting to hint around trying to find out whether Carl had proposed to her.

She couldn't wait any longer. It would have to be today, while they were walking home. She was crazy about Carl but, after all, she had her future to think of. Anyway, if he was as crazy about her as he said he was, he should want to be engaged. But some fellows were like that. You had to give them a push. They'd never do anything on their own hook. Well, if it was a push he needed . . .

She opened her blue eyes as wide as she could get them and looked appealingly at Carl. "Does your mother like me, Carl?"

The boy looked somewhat taken aback but he rejoined quickly. "Why yes. She thinks you're fine. What makes you ask that?"

"Oh nothing." Judie paused and the pause was full of meaning. "You know a man's family can do a lot to turn him against a girl if they want to. I know lots of couples that have been broken up by the man's mother. I thought maybe that might be the trouble."

Carl, reveling in the pleasurable emotion that being referred to casually as a "man" evoked, almost let the last words pass unnoticed. But Judie's silence proclaimed that some answer was expected of him and he said hurriedly, "What trouble? We aren't having any trouble. Besides my mother likes you. She said so."

Judie sighed. It was evident to Carl that he had disappointed her in some way but he couldn't figure out how. They walked along in uneasy silence until with a little cry of delight, Judie called his attention to the shop window they were passing.

"Look, Carl! Isn't that the loveliest living room suite! Wouldn't you like to have a home of your own furnished like that?"

"Why yes. Yes, I guess it would be nice. Pretty expensive though."

"Oh, no it isn't either! Why you can have the cutest apartment for practically nothing if two people are smart and know how to fix things up. I read all those homemaking magazines and I know just how it's done."

Carl regarded her admiringly. "I guess you're right. I always did tell you you're a smart girl, Judie." He broke off as he caught sight of the next shop window. "Say, look at that tennis racket! Isn't that a honey!"

The eager look in Judie's eyes faded and she said little as they walked the next few blocks. They were leaving the stores behind them now and approaching the bridge. When they came to it Judie stopped and leaned on the parapet, looking down at the ravine with an expression of deep melancholy.

"What's the matter, Judie? What are you mad about?"

"I'm not mad," Judie replied sadly. "I'm very unhappy." She paused and the pause was loaded with emphasis. "I don't want to give you up but I'm afraid I must." She let her gaze drift out thoughtfully over the treetops.

"What are you talking about, Judie? What do you want to give me up for?"

"I don't want to give you up but I feel that I must for my own welfare. I can't let you go on like this, just playing with me, telling me you love me when you don't." She turned two tear-filled eyes to him.

The sight unnerved Carl. He felt the terrible necessity of making Judie see reason before she ruined both their lives. He spoke slowly and carefully but with an undercurrent of desperation.

"What do you mean, I don't love you? Haven't I asked you to all the rest of the school dances? Aren't I going to give you my class ring when I get it? Soon as I finish college and get started practicing law, aren't we going to get married? Course it'll take about six years, I guess, but you didn't seem to mind waiting."

Judie let him have the full force of a radiant smile as she exclaimed joyfully, "Then we're engaged! We can use your class ring for an engagement ring. That is, until you can afford a diamond."

She took Carl's arm and pressed it happily to her side as she started out again along the bridge almost skipping as she went. Carl followed in a daze. Nothing was changed. Everything was exactly the same as when they started out. But now, all of a sudden, for no reason at all, Judie was happy. There was something queer here. But he didn't have time now to figure it out.

Where Are We Now?

By Mark Sullivan

The U. S. And The Convoy Issue

ABOUT AMERICA and the war, the question is, where are we now? The answer seems to be: We are somewhere short of what two Cabinet members said on a Thursday night — but somewhere ahead of what the President said on a Friday morning. On Thursday evening, April 24, the Secretaries of State and Navy made formal speeches about America and the war. Both said, strongly, that we must go farther toward the war, must do more than we have been doing.

SULLIVAN

The two speeches on the same night had a special background. The country was intent on a particular aspect of the war, expressed by the word "convoy"—which means giving armed protection to ships carrying supplies from America to England. Throughout the country there was argument between those who said we should convoy, and those who said we should not. The question was scheduled to come up in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee a few days later.

THIS BACKGROUND of public interest was made more intense on the night the two secretaries spoke, by an incident not related to the speeches. During the evening, several news broadcasts mentioned a story that 40 per cent of the supplies we have so far shipped to Britain have been sunk. The figure was seriously incorrect—the percentage of our supplies sunk is very much smaller. But the story had the effect of causing increased attention to what the two secretaries said.

Secretary Hull, without using the word "convoy," said:

"Aid (to Britain) must reach its destination in the shortest of time, in maximum quantity. So ways must be found to do this."

And Secretary Knox, also without using the word "convoy," said:

"We have made our productive facilities available to those who are fighting the Axis . . . Having gone thus far we can only go on . . . We cannot allow our goods to be sunk in the Atlantic . . . We must make our promise good to give aid to Britain. We must see the job through."

With those statements of the two secretaries ringing through the country, President Roosevelt the following forenoon held one of his biweekly press conferences. The questions the newsmen would ask were obvious. Mr. Roosevelt was prepared. He said he felt that his cabinet members spoke for a great many American people. Pointedly one newsman asked, "And for you, Mr. President?" To this Mr. Roosevelt indicated, rather than said, yes—he seemed a little reluctant to be outright. Then, forestalling more questions, he launched upon explanation of just what we are doing. A point about it, to which he gave most pains, was to say that what we are doing is not "convoying." About this he was emphatic, and a little angry. Persons who say we are convoying are—well, Mr. Roosevelt used the short and ugly word. What we are really doing, Mr. Roosevelt said, is "patrolling," as different from convoying as a horse is from a cow.

WHILE MR. ROOSEVELT spoke at great length, the abundance of his words did not make them clear. On some points Mr. Roosevelt seemed deliberately to refrain from being explicit, practicing a caution which may be justified on military grounds. Neither from what he said on his own initiative, nor from his answers to questions, did the newsmen get, clearly or exactly, just what our patrolling means, precisely what is being done. So far as one listening newsman could gather, and in part eke out from inference, which may not be correct, what we are doing seems to be this:

We have had, ever since the war began 18 months ago, what we call a "neutrality patrol" of the American hemisphere. Vessels and planes from our Navy go far out to sea. There is no limit to how far they may go. In the past they have gone as much as 1,000 miles, and they may go, Mr. Roosevelt said, anywhere in the seven seas. This would mean that our patrol, if we choose, may go all the way to the coast of England, or as close as policy may suggest.

What do our patrollers do? They watch for vessels, including submarines and planes, belonging to any nation that we think may become an aggressor against the American continent. When our patrol sees such a vessel, what do they do? Mr. Roosevelt said they report to him—and that is all he said. If our patrollers make the reports in such a way that they become available to the British, Mr. Roosevelt did not say so.

THIS PATROLLING may be of some service to the British, if they are informed of what the patrollers learn. It would be a kind of scout service. But it is much less service than convoying would be. Convoying would mean that vessels and planes from our Navy would accompany cargo ships, and fight off submarines or surface vessels or planes attacking them.

"Convoy," both word and thing, seems taboo. In the idiom of politicians, it "has dynamite in it." It is taboo because in the past Mr. Roosevelt has said that convoying might mean war. To the public, rightly or mistakenly, "convoying" has become a symbolic word, the equivalent of entering the war. Also, in the debate on the lease-lend bill, Senators supporting the bill said that the supplies we sent to Britain would not be convoyed by our Navy.

The problem seems to be to find something which is not convoying but which is of equivalent service to the British. The "patrolling" described by Mr. Roosevelt is far from an equivalent. Actually, what the British need is more than a naval convoy. It is aid in fighting off the German planes that harry shipping close to the English coast.

Wayne Coy, In The Slot

By Ernest K. Lindley

Expert On Defense

THE MAN in "the slot" of national defense administration, to borrow a newspaper phrase, is Wayne Coy, slender, dark-haired, quiet-spoken, 37-year-old Hoosier. His official titles are Special Assistant to the President and Liaison Officer for the Office of Emergency Management. OEM is the top holding company for the emergency defense setup, with the President as its real executive head.

LINDLEY

Coy has received little publicity out of Washington, but for eight years he has been rising in public life and is tied in with several of the most important groups and individuals in the Roosevelt Administration. He is especially close to both Harry Hopkins, the President's most intimate adviser, and to Harold Smith, Budget Director, one of the President's most trusted and frequently-consulted official aides.

TO THE PUBLIC, however, he has been known chiefly as a "McNutt man." He left the editorship of a weekly newspaper to become a secretary to Paul V. McNutt when McNutt became Governor of Indiana in 1933.

A little later he became director of unemployment relief in Indiana, and head of the State welfare department. Two years later he reorganized the State welfare department. In this he had the assistance of experts from the American Public Welfare Association, and, in turn, became known as something of an expert in that field himself.

Also he became State administrator for WPA, and later a regional supervisor. This brought him into contact with Hopkins, who acquired respect for Coy's quiet efficiency.

When McNutt went to the Philippines as High Commissioner, Coy went along as his administrative assistant. In 1939 he preceded McNutt's return to this country by three months, breaking ground for McNutt among the New Dealers. A liberal himself, with many friends among the social welfare people, Coy is largely responsible for the fact that the President offered McNutt the post of Federal Security Administrator.

MEANWHILE, Coy worked in the Budget Bureau. In Indiana he had become acquainted with the experts on public administration, centering in Chicago, who advised the President on reorganization of the Federal administration. When McNutt became FSA Administrator, Coy moved in as Assistant Administrator.

Meanwhile, Coy sedulously cultivated the liberal elements in behalf of McNutt's Presidential candidacy. He also sought and obtained advice on economic policies from such New Deal economists as Lauchlin Currie, now an assistant to the President, and David Cushman Coyle. For months McNutt made straight New Deal speeches. Unquestionably Coy was the shrewdest man in McNutt's political entourage. Although he did not succeed in selling McNutt to the New Deal group as the President's logical successor, he did establish himself firmly both as a person of liberal outlook and as a first-class administrator. He did this despite the fact that he was desperately ill during the latter part of 1939 and the early part of 1940, and only recently has recovered his strength.

Coy knows public administration as few men do who have not given their lives to it—and in the process lost all their imagination. Like Budget Director Smith and a handful of other first-rate public administrators, Coy is able also to understand public policies and to devise means of furthering them.

IN WORKING OUT the setup for the new Office of Civilian Defense, Coy was called in, along with Smith, by the President after advisers of higher rank had been unable to solve the problem to the President's satisfaction. Coy himself almost certainly could have had the post of Administrator of Civilian Defense. But, although he is a wise public relations counselor, he is not a spellbinder. He felt the post required a public figure of recognized standing, with the capacity to stir up the public with speeches.

Coy's work as Liaison Officer for OEM will be mostly behind the scenes. He will be a sort of reporter and confidential agent for the President. But he will be sitting at the crossroads of the emergency defense organization. OEM already has three big subsidiaries: Knudsen-Hillman's OPM, Leon Henderson's Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, and the National Defense Mediation Board. The Office of Civilian Defense soon will be manned. And the Office of Defense Aid, administered by Harry Hopkins, also may be officially tied into OEM—at present it is set up separately under the President. In time there will be another big subsidiary: an office or council of economic welfare.

THE LESSER subsidiaries of OEM include Nelson Rockefeller and his Latin American coordinating work, the Defense Communications Board, the National Defense Research Committee and the Division of Defense Housing Coordination.

Coy will not be a policy-making official in an obvious sense. On policy matters the heads of OEM subsidiaries will continue to have direct access to the President. But Coy will know what is going on inside all these agencies. And indirectly a liaison officer who is also a skillful and resourceful administrator—and has a newspaper man's nose for what is wrong—can coordinate policy.

In Coy, the President has drawn one of the best of the lot: a level-headed liberal without an ax to grind or personal political ambition, and a top-notch administrator.

British Morale

THE BEGINNINGS of an atmospheric change as important as that which led to the lease-lend law are now clearly perceptible in Washington. In the period between the lease-lend law's enactment and the Balkan tragedy, even the boldest members of the Administration tended to regard American aid for Britain with considerable complacency. Enough was being done, was the attitude; and when more was required, more would be done. Now, however, this complacency has vanished like mist on a hot morning.

ALSOP

It has been dispelled by a deeply significant new note in reports from Britain in recent weeks—a note of doubt of Britain's power to resist indefinitely without far more substantial help than is now being given.

The note has been struck by a half dozen returning observers, both official and unofficial, but all extremely competent. One school, best represented by the brilliant president of Harvard, James Bryant Conant, does not question the resilience of British morale, but argues that Britain's brute strength will soon be exhausted if no greater help comes. President Conant's mission of exchanging scientific information with the British gave him wide and easy access in London. He is understood to have told members of the Administration here that this country had only a few months—probably until the end of summer at the outside—to decide whether to "put up or shut up."

A second school centered in the War Department, affirms the magnificence of the British people's courage, but points out that the wellspring of courage is hope, and that Britain's hopes have been pinned on the United States for many months. If these hopes are disappointed, the second school says, the worst can easily happen. The British leaders may refuse to sustain a suicidal war. The British war effort may falter from internal weakness. Such petty intrigues against Winston Churchill as have lately been rumored from London may well become serious and effective, bringing in an appeasement government. However it happens, the end will be a negotiated peace, leaving Germany the strongest nation in the world, with Britain exhausted and subservient, and the United States standing alone.

THIS IS NOT defeatism of the Lindbergh sort. Not one of the men whose reports have caused such disquiet here questions for an instant that the war can be won if Britain and the United States will stand together as fighting partners. Nor is it a call for a large American expeditionary force. It is simply a hard-headed assessment of the pressing need for bold and decisive American action to meet such problems as that of the Atlantic, that of North Africa, and that of the Far East.

The Mediterranean-North African situation is the best case in point. At present, the state of affairs is critical. After the Balkan disaster, Turkey has turned soggy, and may give German forces the right of transit to attack the oil fields of Irak. The Russians, whose pressure Turkey can hardly resist, have just signed a pact with Japan at Germany's direction. A chunk of Persia was always to be one of their rewards for adherence to the Axis, and the Russo-Persian border is now reported closed. Irak itself, although British troops have landed, is still in the hands of a pro-German government.

In Egypt, the British Mediterranean base, the British are fighting a doubtful campaign against a numerically superior German-Italian force. In French North Africa, Weygand's position has already been seriously undermined. German agents are in virtually full control of Casa Blanca. In Spain, Gen. Franco is resisting German demands against odds. And in Metropolitan France there are signs that the Vichy regime may be preparing for a final surrender.

This is painting the picture purposely as dark as it can be made. Actually our military experts give the British better than an even chance to meet the danger in the Mediteranean. But the point is that Mediteranean may go. American policy must be calculated on that possibility. The possibility means in turn that Germans may obtain supplies, including oil, for a very long war. And the effect of such a prospect on British strength and British morale can easily be understood.

PITIFULLY LITTLE active assistance from this country would have restored the balance in the Mediterranean, preventing all but the comparatively meaningless Balkan tragedy, which would be far from a net loss if it were not for its effects on the will to resist in other countries. Pitifully little active assistance would restore the balance now. It is the same in most of the major war situations. In each case the margin is slight between successful resistance and defeat. But in each case, because this country will not cover the margin, defeat comes in the end.

KINTNER

In Britain, the men responsible for their country's present plight have merely been put into a sort of Coventry. The worst that Sir John Simon, Sir Horace Wilson and their sort have had to fear is a few veiled or open insults when they appear in public. But those American leaders who are now doing all in their power to prevent the crucial margin from being covered, had best remember that the temper of our people is not so easy, polite and forgiving as that of the British. They had best ask themselves, "When we stand, isolated and at bay, in a world whose masters are our enemies, shall I be held to blame? And if I am, how shall I save my skin?"

Churchill's Latest Accounting

AT THE VERY moment that Winston Churchill was addressing the people of Great Britain, the British Empire and the United States yesterday, German troops were moving into Athens and the spearhead of the Axis forces in Egypt was reaching out beyond Sollum in a renewal of the interrupted drive to ward Suez.

NOVER

Churchill's speech followed a fearful fortnight of disaster for Great Britain and her allies. The outlook facing the British is grim so grim that some insist it is hopeless. But while the British premier was anything but laggard in exposing the dour realities of the present—indeed, he warned his people that their present trials may soon be multiplied by new dangers—there was not a scintilla of discouragement in his remarks. On the contrary, he repeated again what he has emphasized so often in the past, that he had unflinching faith in Britain's ultimate victory.

WAS HE JUST whistling to keep up his courage? The defeatists will say so. Their tribe has increased in this country as a result of what has happened in the Balkans and Africa and so also has their belief in the hopelessness of the British cause. Nor will they be convinced that the main battle was not that fought in Greece or that being fought in Egypt but the one taking place in the Atlantic.

In giving an accounting of recent events Churchill minimized none of the defeats recently suffered by Great Britain and her allies. He spoke frankly of the events that led up to the debacle in the Balkans and the new threat which has arisen in North Africa. On February 9, following the fall of Bengal, he had declared that: "Egypt and the Suez Canal are safe." He did not repeat that assurance this time. On the contrary, he made it clear that Great Britain was about to face a serious challenge to her position not only in Egypt but everywhere else in the Mediterranean area as well.

"It is certain," he said, "that fresh dangers beside those which threaten Egypt may come upon us in the Mediterranean. The war may spread to Spain and Morocco. It may spread westward to Turkey and Russia. The Germans may lay their hands for a time upon wheat lands of the Ukraine and oil wells of the Caucasus. They may dominate the Black Sea. They may dominate the Caspian." Yet his conclusion was that "Hitler cannot find safety from avenging justice in the East, the Middle East or Far East."

IN OTHER WORDS, if Hitler is to win he must win the Battle of Britain. And to win that battle he must first win the Battle of the Atlantic. That remains the main, the decisive, theater of war.

If the supplies which the United States is prepared to send in ever-increasing quantities to Great Britain do not reach her, she may ultimately find herself so weakened as to be unable to resist the invasion which Hitler has so far found it advisable to postpone. If, on the other hand, the bridge of ships across the Atlantic can be maintained and it can only be maintained effectively with American aid, the new victories which Hitler has just won will prove of only temporary value; more a liability than an asset.

There is no doubt that he will, in the meantime, capitalize these victories for all they are worth. He will use his newly acquired bases in Greece and Libya for aerial assaults on Alexandria. He will try and win the consent of Turkey to a "peaceful" German occupation of the Dardanelles, and a passageway across Anatolia, of Spain to a German thrust at Gilbraltar, of the Vichy government to naval as well as further economic collaboration with the Third Reich. Should he move into Spain the occupation of Portugal might follow soon after.

He may succeed in one or more of these ventures or all of them. The tide in the Mediterranean has swung sharply in his favor although the ultimate outcome of the struggle in that important region cannot yet be predicted with any degree of certainty. It is, for instance, far too early to assume that the Axis forces will succeed in driving out the British from Alexandria and Suez. Nor can it be assumed that the British will easily be dislodged from Gibraltar. The struggle for the control of the Mediterranean is bound to be a hard and bitter one. Hitler has many trumps but he does not have all of them. The British have at least one—sea power—which may prove of decisive importance.

But whatever happens in the Mediterranean will be less important than what happens in the Atlantic. The British can succeed in staving off repeated Axis thrusts against their positions in the Mediterranean and yet lose the war by being cut off from the supplies we are in a position to send them. Hitler can win in the Mediterranean and yet lose the war by failing to cut the British lifeline in the Atlantic. For if it is not cut the growing output of the American defense industry will tell in the scales. The Battle of the Atlantic is a battle for time.

16,000 Ideas For Defense Received Here

Copyright by New York Times

The American people, some inventors by profession and some just men and women with ideas, have poured 16,000 inventions and suggestions for strengthening the National Defense equipment of the United States into the office of the National Inventors Council, the Department of Commerce announced today.

"Many of the suggestions have been found to be highly useful for defense purposes," the department said, "and have been adopted by the War and Navy Departments."

At the present time such new suggestions are being received at the rate of 100 every working day.

All inventions and suggestions received by the council, which was created by the Secretary of Commerce, with the concurrence of the President, must pass the acid test of the technical staff at headquarters.

When a suggestion gets past this first hurdle it is referred to an appropriate technical committee for closer study and analysis. Those ideas which pass this second searching review ultimately come before the whole council, which is comprised of outstanding American inventors, scientists and businessmen with wide experience in the development and utilization of inventions. When the council approves an invention or suggestion, it is turned over to the Army or Navy.

In order that suggestions or inventions may receive full consideration by council experts, they must be submitted in writing and in such detail that the objectives and proposed methods or means of carrying them into effect are fully and clearly stated.

The council is not a part of the United States Patent Office, nor has it any official connection with that office. It is not necessary for a suggestion submitted to the council to involve the element of invention as required by the patent laws. If a suggestion is decided by the council to be of value for defense purposes, it may be adopted if found superior to similar devices already in use although the idea embodied in the device may not be new.

No patent or other rights are secured by submitting suggestions or inventions to the council, the department said. Those desiring to secure patent rights for an invention must file a patent application in the usual manner in the Patent Office.

'House Cooling' Party Among Novel Fetes

Two azalea parties, a "house cooling" party, and a "bas relief" party kept Washingtonians on the jump yesterday. Sounds startling, doesn't it? But when more original parties are invented, the citizens of the Capital will have thought them up.

Senator Joseph Guffey and the Misses Ida and Pauletta Guffey, his sisters, asked friends in to see the bas relief which Mrs. John Wiley has recently completed of the Senator. The wife of our former Minister to Latvia, who is now in the State Department, Mrs. Wiley is a talented artist and has done many bas reliefs and statues for gardens.

Twelve hours before the moving vans arrived to take away their furniture, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Compton were hosts at a farewell party at their home. The house, which is at the corner of Cathedral Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street, has just been bought by the Swiss government for use as a consulate. The Comptons leave today to spend the summer on their farm near Washington, and probably will build a new home next fall.

Meems, Tompkinses Entertain

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem and Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Tompkins, asked friends in yesterday for a look at their respective gardens. The Meem dogwood and azaleas are in full bloom, and the shrubs on the Tompkins grounds are also at their best.

The Guffey home at 2929 Benton Place was the scene of their party, which the hosts had organized on the spur of the moment. It began as a tea, continued with cocktails, and ended up as a buffet supper, with the Misses Guffey going on later to the United China benefit at Constitution Hall. Guests yesterday spilled out of the house onto the terrace, which overlooks an attractive garden in the Rock Creek Park section. The Guffeys also have dogwood, and it was at its best yesterday.

Mrs. Wiley was present and received many compliments on her bas-relief, which is 4 feet in length and is placed over the mantel in the drawing room. Miss Ida Guffey had chosen a cool summer print for the occasion, and her sister was in a two-toned costume, a black skirt and China red figured blouse. Their other sister, Mrs. Carroll Miller, is vacationing in the South. On her return the family plan to have additional friends in for other pleasant al fresco gatherings.

Sharing honors at the Compton party were Dr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Compton, of Chicago, and Mr. and Mrs. Harper Sibley. Dr. Compton, who is internationally known as a physicist, is the brother of the host. Mr. Sibley is down here for the United States Chamber of Commerce meetings which are drawing so many leading figures of the business world to Washington this week.

Tea tables were set up in the Compton's garden and guests spent most of their time outdoors. Mr. and Mrs. Compton have lived in their home for 20 years and their friends present yesterday regretted it was the last time they will entertain there.

Mr. and Mrs. Meem's daughters, Mrs. Edward B. McLean, jr., and Miss Eleanor Meem, were on hand to assist their parents at their tea. The hostess wore a becoming flowered print. The young McLeans, who have been spending several months in Washington, will be off the end of the week for their home in Colorado Springs.

Especially lovely is the tree of pink dogwood on the Meem front lawn. The yard is blooming with azaleas, which are out unusually early this year because of the exceptionally warm spring. Mrs. Meem's last azalea party was in May.

White Iris Centers Tables

The tea table at Mr. and Mrs. Meem's party was centered a cluster of white iris and baby's breath. The buffet was a lavish one, among the features being tiny squares of hot mince pie. Young Mrs. McLean wore a black wool dress with a bolero jacket and white blouse accented with a red sash. Her sister had chosen a black frock with a red printed panel extending down the front.

The Tompkins home at 3001 Garrison Street is built on the site of a Civil War fort. The battlements still remain and are covered with the beautiful dogwood blossoms. Between three and four hundred of their friends called yesterday to enjoy the flowers and sip a cooling drink beneath the trees.

Another of the many parties given last night was the dinner at which Mr. and Mrs. Prentiss L. Coonley were hosts at their home in Georgetown. Guest of honor was the latter's sister, Mrs. Edward Hasler, of Lake Forest, Ill., who is here on a brief visit. The hosts' daughter, Miss Eleanor Coonley, was down from New York for the weekend, and the other guests were most members of the family.

Parties Set For Dr. Quo

A whirl of parties has been arranged for the newly appointed Foreign Minister of China, Dr. Quo Tai-chai, who is here on a visit. Over dinner and luncheon tables he will discuss important matters of state with top American governmental and diplomatic officials.

The Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, will fete Dr. Quo Tai-chai at a men's luncheon today and again at dinner tomorrow. On Wednesday the foreign minister will meet a large section of Washington society at a reception at Twin Oaks, from 5 to 7. That night Dr. and Mrs. T. V. Soong will entertain at dinner for him.

The British Ambassador and Lady Halifax will be hosts at a luncheon for Dr. Quo Tai-chai, who will take the plane in the afternoon to attend a dinner in New York. He will return to Washington for the luncheon which the Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, will give for him on Friday, and that afternoon Dr. Stanley Hornbeck, of the State Department will be host at a stag cocktail party in his honor.

Jewish Group To Fete Wallace

Vice President Wallace will be guest of honor and speaker at the annual donors luncheon to be given by the Sisterhood of the Washington Hebrew Congregation May 19 at the Shoreham Hotel.

Mrs. Milton Shlesinger, general chairman, with Mrs. Norman Gerstenfeld, who is program chairman, arranged the program.

Additional chairmen include Mrs. Herbert Sommers and Mrs. Jerome Horowitz, hostesses; Mrs. Alvin Newmeyer, decorations; Mrs. Irwing Fogel, ushers; Mrs. Max Goodman, tickets, and Mrs. Benjamin Brill, in charge of the rummage store at 1241 Seventh Street Northwest, where tickets may be earned for the luncheon.

Goodwins at Home After Honeymoon

Mr and Mrs. Henry Allen Daughtridge, of Rocky Mount, N. C., announce the marriage of their daughter, Dorothy, to William Jarvis Goodwin. The ceremony took place April 5 at Frederick, Md., and after a honeymoon in the South, the couple are at home at 5402 Connecticut Avenue.

Mrs. Goodwin is the granddaughter of the late Elijah Longstreet Daughtridge, one time Governor of North Carolina. She received her law degree at the National University Law School and is a member of Phi Delta Delta international legal fraternity. She is associated with the office of Nelson Rockefeller, coordinator of Cultural and Economic Relations with Latin America.

Mr. Goodwin, who is the son of the late Maj. and Mrs. W. J. Goodwin, of Waco, Tex., received a law degree from Baylor University. He is now a special agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Nancy Squadrito Engaged to Wed

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Squadrito, of New York, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Nancy M. Squadrito, to Joseph L. LeMay, of this city, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo A. LeMay, of Waterford.

Miss Squadrito was graduated from Albany Business College and is now connected with the War Department here. Mr. LeMay also was graduated from Albany Business College and is working with the Navy Department here.

The wedding will take place on Monday morning, June 2, at a nuptial Mass in St. Augustine's Church. Following their marriage the couple will reside here.

Plan Benefit Party

The Mothers Club of the preschool kindergarten of Cottage City School will have a card and bingo party for the benefit of the school playground tomorrow night at the Cottage City Fire Department, Baltimore Boulevard from 8:30 to 11 o'clock.

Senator and Mrs. Millard E. Tydings are pictured with W. Preston Lane, of Hagerstown (left), at the annual running of the Maryland Hunt Cup Race on Saturday. Mr. Lane is Democratic National Committeeman for Maryland. The race, which takes place on the Martin estate at Glyndon, Md., is the most important steeplechase event in the country and was attended by thousands from all over the United States

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

ALTHOUGH the Brinkley Smithers left Washington several years ago for Beaverbrook Farm in the Worthington Valley, they make it a point to keep in touch with their friends in the Capital. They very thoughtfully realized that a number of Washingtonians would be parched and tired after the Maryland Hunt Cup on Saturday so Mrs. Smithers gathered a group of them in for cocktails after the race. The party took place in the Smithers' attractive little guest house and overflowed onto the stone terrace overlooking their woods and farm. The Smithers are living in the guest house while a wing is being added to their big house, and personally conducted tours of the construction were popular. Narcissi and daffodils springing up through the wood surrounding the house made flower beds.

Dropping by the Smithers for a cool drink on their way back to Washington were Mr. and Mrs. Creighton Peet, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Merrill, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., and Mrs. Walter White. Also present were Laura and Ruth Tuckerman, Elsie Ekengren, Dolly Corbin, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Downs, Bill McCoomb, Eugene O'Dunne, Charles Sweeney and Stephan Morris.

WHEN Mrs. Alfred Granger asked friends for tea the other afternoon they were invited to wander upstairs, downstairs and in the garden of the Georgetown house in which she has installed herself so charmingly. Mrs. Granger's daughter, Mrs. Arthur Krock, arrived looking very chic and with two scarlet poppies perched on her head by way of a hat. After the manner of daughters who have learned all their good housekeeping at the maternal knee, Mrs. Krock went right out on the terrace and began moving the white iron furniture around to her own liking while her mother smiled indulgently.

Among those gathered around Mrs. Granger's inviting tea table were Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Mrs. Raymond Lee, Mrs. Edward R. Finkenstaedt, Miss Laura Harlan, Mrs. Richard Porter Davidson and Mrs. Crosby Miller. Mrs. Miller's hat set all the ladies off into gales of admiration, for its was an authentic tiny Breton headdress made of white embroidered linen and black velt and was extremely chic.

DROPPING by Mrs. William Streett's later on for a cocktail, I found another congenial gathering. Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell were there, she handsome and looking "fresh-out-of-a-handbox," as usual, and Johnny being congratulated on his svelte figure, which is the result of downright patriotism. He has followed a rigorous diet and even had an operation on his leg so that he can answer "Here!" at roll call when his Reserve regiment is mustered in.

Also present were Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik, who were saying that Edgar, jr., has volunteered for the Naval Air Service. Mr. Prochnik's daughter, Mrs. Frank Spaulding, has taken a cottage at Rehoboth for the summer which will be good news to the many Washington friends of the former Loranda Prochnik.

Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins was stunning in black with touches of jonquil yellow and wore a black straw hat trimmed with yellow flowers. Mrs. Blaise de Sibour, who was accompanied by her husband, had also matched her hat to her frock of sage-green silk printed in pink.

Mrs. Noyes Lewis made everyone laugh by complaining that she had inadvertently left her front door key in the lock all of one night and that absolutely no one had come in. The key was found next morning by the cook who sent it upstairs on Mrs. Lewis' breakfast tray. Several others came by Mrs. Sreett's that afternoon, among them Mrs. Cortlandt Parker and Lieut. Dan Simons.

Adams and Col. F. E. Johnston.

A group went on afterwards to the home of Gen. and Mrs. Charles Drake for a buffet supper. The hostess had decorated the rooms with masses of white lilacs, her favorite flower. Among the guests were the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos; the Commercial Counselor of the British Embassy and Lady Chalkley; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Gen. and Mrs. William Connor, Mrs. Dougherty, Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim and Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould.

Eat Protein And Reduce Painlessly

By Ida Jean Kain

STOUTNESS is too high a price to pay for overeating. Since you've taken on weight you're not very happy about the way you look. Besides, you get out of breath when you climb stairs or try to hurry, and your arches have been giving you trouble of late.

No doubt you tried dieting, but were so hungry and depressed that you concluded you might as well be fat as miserable.

But dieting isn't like that any more! You eat to get slim, thanks to the science of nutrition. The low calorie menu can be balanced to include an abundance of the essential minerals, vitamins and protein and it is now possible to reduce safely and without discomfort, no matter how excessive the overweight.

Increase Protein

The first dietary step is to increase the protein. There are several reasons for this. Protein supplies the material to make good the daily wear and tear. High protein meals quickly produce a feeling of satiety—the reducer feels as if she has eaten a good meal. Because of the specific dynamic effect, protein acts like magic to burn more calories. Ordinarily you can't eat more of something and reduce, but science has proved that by using liberal amounts of the complete protein foods—lean meat, eggs, cheese and skim milk—you can reduce faster.

Vitamins and minerals are not stored along with fat, so these are also included daily in the balanced diet. You must have fresh vegetables, raw and cooked; fresh fruits, whole grain or vitamin B enriched bread, and butter in restricted amounts.

Vegetables Needed

To assure adequate vitamins on a low calorie diet, you must either make a habit of choosing the rich food sources or supplement the menus with a concentrate. Because the dairy products which are high in vitamin A are also high in calories, they must be restricted. But certain vegetables and fruits are excellent sources and should be included daily. These are: one green leafy salad vegetable, such as escarole, and one cooked green, such as beet greens or spinach; a yellow vegetable such as carrots or squash; a yellow fruit—peaches ar apricots.

Whole grains, which are the best food source of vitamin B, must also be restricted in the reducer's diet, and it seems to be a wise precaution to supplement the prolonged diet with vitamin B in concentrated form.

Follow these rules of nutrition in planning your diet.

The Distinguished Guests

Chairman—Now, of course, we want only the most distinguished women for our banquet honor guests.

Mrs. Bounce—Say, we ought to have Mrs. Jinks?

Chorus—What Mrs. Jinks?

Mrs. Bounce—Mrs. Nicodemus Jinks. Her husband's that big man who's just come here in defense.

Mrs. Preen—Is she smart looking?

Mrs. Bounce—We-ll, of course, I've never seen her, but I do think we ought to have some important people in defense.

Mrs. Piney—I know a woman we ought to invite—Geraldine Woodbine Thrush.

Chorus—Who is she?

Mrs. Piney—Well, she's just written a very wonderful patriotic song that she's expecting to get published.

Mrs. Doodle—I have a little friend who's just published a book of poems.

Chairman—Well, I really think we ought to choose women of national reputation—

Mrs. Nitter—Oh, there's Senator Tweedle's wife! Everybody knows him.

Mrs. Preen—She's not very smart looking.

Mrs. Bounce—She was a Putterby—

Mrs. Hazey—I know a very interesting woman! She's a direct descendant of Pocahontas.

Mrs. Piney—Well as far as that goes, my grandmother—

Chorus—Say, my family—

Chairman—Girls! Girls! We've got to get this list worked out. Mrs. Hazey, just what has your woman done—besides being descended from Pocahontas?

Mrs. Hazey—Well, her husband's quite noted in the educational field. I think he's written a book on economics or something.

Mrs. Preen—I think our banquet table should look decorative. Why don't we have some of the ten best dressed women?

Chairman—We-ll, I suppose that would be all right . . . if we selected some of the better known ones.

Mrs. Preen—We could have Mrs. Slither. Her husband's the big lapel pin man. Everyone knows Slither's Gadgets.

Chairman—But really don't you think we ought to get women who are a little more of the—well, solid type?

Mrs. Piney—Mrs. Spiel's a wonderful woman. You know—Dr. Spiel's wife, the famous preacher.

Mrs. Joyner—Say, we can't leave out our national officials. We'll have to have some Cabinet wives.

Mrs. Preen—Yes, and some Embassy wives.

Mrs. Bounce—We ought to have some more defense wives—besides Mrs. Jinks.

Mrs. Hazey—Another thing, if we have Mrs. Tweedle we ought to have some more senator's wives—

Chairman—But really we can't have too many—

Mrs. Nitter—There are a lot of important Army and Navy wives here now.

Chairman—Another thing, don't you think we ought to have some women who have—well, who have sort of done things themselves?

Mrs. Joyner—We simply won't have the room!

Mrs. Piney—Well, I certainly do think we ought to have Geraldine Woodbine Thrush.

Mrs. Doodle—And this friend of mine who's bringing out this book of poems.

Mrs. Nitter—Yes, and some famous movie stars or something.

Mrs. Joyner—Madam Chairman, I move we appoint a subcommittee to weed out the wives—that is, to select the more important ones and the ones we ought to have. Then if there is any room left, we can invite these other women.

Chairman—All right—

Mrs. Bounce—Just a minute! How would the subcommittee decide on which wives to keep?

Chairman—We-ll—er—I suppose . . . that is . . . well I guess the committee could sort of consult the husband's ratings.

Apply Lipstick Deftly

Here's fair warning to the girl who wears too much lipstick, too much rouge. She accents her mouth and cheeks—and her eyes promptly go into eclipse. Screen stars today have outgrown the "gooey" lip make-up of yesteryear, prefer instead to accent their eyes. For her role in "Before the Fact," in which she plays a young English girl, Joan Fontaine wears no color at all with the exception of mascara and a little rose lipstick. Makes her eyes her most effective feature.

Mary Haworth's Mail

At Irregular Intervals, Father Innovates Changes In the Baby's Schedule; His Wife Resents These 'Policy Shifts;' They Quarrel; She Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I would like your opinion on the following matter, which is contributing to an unhappy situation in my home. I am a normally intelligent wife, past 30, married four years, and have a baby 15 months old. I have always been under the impression that, in normal circumstances, a mother is primarily responsible for the health and well-being of her children.

However, I am faced with the problem of dealing with a husband who, at irregular intervals, intereferes in the business of caring for the baby, disrupting his normal routine and upsetting everyone concerned. The baby has been unusually healthy since birth, and, of course, it is my desire to keep him so.

It happens that my husband's working hours permit him to be at home every afternoon and one whole day a week, while I work all day, six days a week, in order to pay for the nurse who takes my place with the baby, and for medical treatment that has been necessary since the baby came. In my absence, my husband induces the maid to try new arrangements for the baby's feeding and makes other changes,—for no apparent reason except to have a hand in the baby's "bringing up."

I do not believe in a man's neglecting or ignoring his children, but when they are thriving on a certain regimen, it is rather distressing to be faced, every so often, with shifts of policy which represent needless interference in affairs that I feel are my responsibility. If I am late getting home from work, I am accused of neglecting the baby; of not wanting to be with him as much as possible. But if I insist upon a sane routine, and protest my husband's trying out new schemes on the baby, he becomes angry and abusive ,and reminds me that he is the father, and entitled to as much "say" in his bringing up as I have. What do you think of such a situation? And what do you advise me to do about it?

DISTRESSED.

Wise to Encourage Man's Paternal Bent

DEAR DISTRESSED: No one would deny that it is primarily the mother's business to function as chief executive in nursery matters;—but not the least of her duties, in that domain, is to foster a close bond between baby and father. And if that means cheerfully granting father a free hand, occasionally, to mess up baby's schedule, under the delusion that he is demonstrating parental knowledgeability and helpfulness co-equal to mother's, in baby's affairs,—why, so be it.

There is much to be said in favor of a "sane routine" of baby care, certainly. But baby has needs of the spirit as well as needs of the body. He needs to be picked up and talked to by "one of his own," one who dearly loves him, at intervals during the day,—as scientists in baby lore have long since discovered. Thus, in a domestic setup where mother is, of necessity, outside baby's ken all day, six days of the week,—baby is going to profit by, rather than suffer from, a generous amount of brashly administered, order-defying, love-inspired notice from father.

You think you are defending the baby's interests in upbraiding his father for "interfering" with his schedule. But in more ways than one, you are jeopardizing his welfare by the stand you are maintaining. Your "hands-off" policy, if taken literally by the father, tends gradually to shrivel his robust and laudable parental enthusiasm; and tends, also, to sow seeds of jealous resentment of his son in his breast. Then, too, it provokes those "angry and abusive" quarrels which, if conducted within the baby's hearing-range, must already be registering cruelly upon his nervous system,—laying the groundwork for who knows what neurotic traits in the future?

I am willing to concede that your husband's fond muddling in the nursery leaves much to be desired,—when measured by standards of Solomon-wise fatherly behavior. But I find your acid disapproval of his well-meant ministrations far more deplorable. It seems to me the most sensible attitude you could take, in the circumstances, would be one of warm appreciation of your husband's intentions. If baby suffers incidental discomfort as a result of his father's affectionately experimental "policy-shifts," you should exercise your superior talent for baby-care to assuage that discomfort, discreetly and diplomatically—in such ways as spare father the humiliation of being made to feel like a fool.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Lemon Biscuits

APPLE blossoms, so lovely with their pink and white freshness, are quite enough to inspire one to give a delicious springtime luncheon. With apple blossoms as a centerpiece, a dainty luncheon cloth and gleaming silver, will all contribute to create spring atmosphere.

A luncheon menu as delicious to taste as the blossoms are to view, might be the following one:

Apple Blossom Luncheon

Consomme
Paprika crackers, green olives
Grilled sweetbreads on toast points
New asparagus with
Hollandaise sauce
Lemon biscuits
Watermelon circles
Fresh strawberry tarts
Coffee
Pastel candies

The following recipe is the one for making lemon biscuits:

Lemon Biscuits—Sift cake flour once, measure to 2 cups, and add 2 teaspoons baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt and sift again. Cut in 4 tablespoons butter or other shortening; add 1½ teaspoons grated lemon rind and blend. Add 2-3 cup milk, all at once, and stir carefully until all flour is dampened. Then stir vigorously until mixture forms a soft dough and follows spoon around bowl. Turn out immediately on slightly seconds. Roll ¼ inch thick and cut with 1½-inch floured biscuit cutter. Combine 4 tablespoons sugar, 1½ teaspoons lemon rind and about ¼ teaspoon lemon juice, to make a crumbly mixture. Place half of biscuits in greased muffin pans, spread with melted butter and then with sugar mixture, and top with remaining biscuits, pressing lightly together. Bake in hot oven, 450 degreees, 8 to 10 minutes, or until done. Makes 2½ dozen biscuits.

Peach and Blue Scheme Pleasing In an Old House

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

"I wish you could see our old house," writes Mrs. B. R. L. "Your advice was so helpful to me a few years ago in redecorating that I've always meant to write you about it. I have especially enjoyed my northeast bedroom with peach-colored walls and blue silk draperies and pieces of old milk glass in blue (including two lamp bases). The flowered Axminster rug was about threadbare, so I've just bought a deep peach or apricot two-twist broadloom, a sort of frieze. The mahogany furniture looks lovely on it.

"The house itself is gray outside and has a balcony all across one end which gives onto a little walled garden and a lovely view beyond. The house has tiny bedrooms but a gorgeous big drawing room on the second floor with two paneled ends and a lovely reeded mantel. We have combined a few pieces of antique seventeenth and eighteenth century Spanish frieze and an arm chair in gold color brocatelle. And I was lucky to have saved my mother's drawing room curtains, which just suit the four big windows in the white side walls."

Indeed, we are always delighted to hear about interesting homes of our readers, and yours sounds especially charming. And how wise you've been about blending modern comfort with beautiful old things.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

EVERYONE AT PAUL YOUNG'S will be in the floor show beginning tomorrow night—from big Paul himself to the littlest waitress. For Jerry and Turk, fresh from 19 weeks in Baltimore's Two O'Clock Club, will open at P. Y.'s. And when they start to work everyone within grabbing distance is drafted into their act. It's going to be a holocaust . . . Tonight's your last chance to enjoy Al Merin, cleverest of Washington emcees. His skits are sharp and funny as a Peter Arno cartoon, whether he's being a sloe-eyed gigolo full of "woo" ideas or a young man primping in front of a vending machine mirror . . . The King Cole Trio rolls on like ten tons of anthracite. When they're joined by Al Spieldock's band and Jerry Brandow's trumpet for an after-sweetly at Madrillon, will open at midnight "jive concert," the building rocks. Many of our town's rhythm boys drop in for this late "jam" symphony. We met Madrillon's Hugh Barteman and Pianist Sammy Marks hurrying in just as we left. There's a sizzly rumor that Mary La Marr, who used to sing so Paul Young's tomorrow.

Formal summer opening of the Lounge Riviera will take place on May 21. The new Riviera annex will be newly air-conditioned and loads of party trimmings and special diversion will make the affair a major May event.

"MAYTIME" IN LOTUS. Dick Lam, of the Lotus, is beating the calendar by three days in opening his new "Maytime Revue" today. It includes dancer Gertrude Erdy, from Los Angeles' Coconut Grove; ballroom steppers St. Clair and Durand, who were starred at the Texas Centennial, and the Regan Boys, professional daredevils. The eight Maytime dancing beauties will disport themselves in the Western manner as rodeo steppers and Injun princesses.

MAESTRO DON CARPER, of Cafe Caprice, has been named by the Music Corporation of America to select the "Hit Parade" tunes indicated by the barometer of public taste in Washington.

THE CASINO ROYAL will unveil a sparkling new "Mayfair Revue" on Wednesday. Those polished ballroom dancers, Francois and Diane, will head the show. Joyce Libby's Mayfair Girls will present colorful parade and picture numbers. Hal Hamilton's juggling and unicycle trickery is due to contribute the element of novelty. Add on Jack Schafer, the "one-man jive circus." Bob Preble's romantic songs and Felix Zimmer's accordioning and you'll have what-a-show!

The cute Anchorettes of the Anchor Room were so glad to see songstress Eileen George return after her bout with laryngitis that they tossed a gay luncheon party at the Lotus in her honor.

INTERESTING VISITORS. Katharine Hepburn and her sister ringsiding in the Cosmos Room, inhaling quantities of Cavallaro rhythm . . . Radio's Kibitzers, Toby and Larry, who bounce a hundred laughs over the airwaves every day, lunching luxuriously at Olmsted's . . . Don Knight Wells, pleasant young amateur singer, and his mother, Mrs. Carolyn Wells, both contributing to floor show diversion in Ciro's Famous Village . . . The little 3-year-old boy whom Jimmy Summerville lifted up to the Hi Hat mike so that he could say a resounding "hello" to his mamma across the room . . . Maestro Bert Bernath, of the Pall Mall Room, and Realtor Morris Kafka both riding on the merry-go-round at Glen Echo, surrounded by their young hopefuls:

GORGEOUS SENTIMENTS. "Salud Dinero y Amor" being sung by Van Taylor in Restaurant "823" signifies wishes for good fortune in acquiring both wealth and true love. Van says it's one of the most popular of South American songs. He picked it up at the Kelly-Ritz in Panama.

WITH THE SEERS. The United States will go totalitarian. Women will rule the earth within the next 200 years. There'll be a civil war between capital and labor in '43 and '44. So says Leo, the white mustachioed astrologist of Mayfair. Omigosh! Where's the aspirin! . . . Guido, psychoanalyst of the Rainbow Room, told Bette Davis five years ago that she would become Hollywood's greatest movie star. But no one can convince us that this prophecy wasn't a bust, oscars or no oscars . . . Beauteous Beverly Blayne has been crystal reading in Jack Coffey's floor show in the Metronome Room. It was a pleasure to hear her tell the darnedest fibs.

MONTE SANTO,
most bewitchingly bewhiskered of the Shoreham's Music Hall Boys

Those Music Hall Boys are staying on at the Shoreham for their umpty-steenth week. New this week are the graceful Rossi Sisters, of the Follies Bergere, and the Jack Starnes Duo.

THE MARACAS HAVE IT—especially when swung in Carmen Mirandish fashion by that black-eyed Mexican torpedo, Lima D'Acosta, of the Silver Fox . . . Or when proprietor Charlie Braden, of the Plymouth, takes a notion to show that he can shake up maraca rhythm as deftly as he does a cocktail.

GLEN ECHO FOOD FANCIES. Drummer Sammy Ferro trains on spaghetti, meat balls and beef for his nightly bango-bango in the Spanish Garden Ballroom. Every afternoon you'll find Maestro Paul Kain and Saxist Jim Fitzpatrick in Dick's Grill surrounding beefsteaks.

NEPTUNIQUE! That's the perfect word for the opening of Joe Collins and his Mad Hatters in the Neptune Room on Saturday. It was coined by inspired publicist Frank Romer, who also described the Mad Hatters as "Noteworthies." He understated it. They're melomaniacs and swingaleptics, and you'll be missing the finest form of extroverted rhythm if you don't hurry to Neptune. P. S.: That's all stuff about the hats. They never wear 'em.

Mike Fera, of Dick Koons' orchestra, and moving spirit of the Night Owl softball league, says that the Sports Center has contributed a silver trophy for this year's winning team.

A MESSENGER FROM GARCIA, in a Western Union uniform, has just dashed in with the news that "Those Foolish Follies" is the name of Jack Coffey's new revue to be presented in the Metronome Room this evening. It'll include an Abbott and Costello skit, a satire on Washington traffic and a quiz called "Inflammation, Please," in which you and you will be invited to participate. If you win a prize, it'll serve you right.

Dragon Roars at Washington Committee's Benefit Program for Chinese War Sufferers

Abridged Text of Plea By Bullitt

Text of former Ambassador William C. Bullitt's talk on "Our Western Front" at Constitution Hall last night:

To speak of the Chinese is to stand before forty centuries of history facing a people whose civilization was great before Athens existed or Rome was founded: a people who today are as young in courage as they are old in wisdom.

All the bitter roads of battle and starvation that mankind is now traveling have been trod many times by the people of China. However tragic a street of sorrow—the Chinese have been down that street before. They have survived because in physical endurance and intellectual power they are unsurpassed by any people on earth. They have grown wise because long ago, out of the sufferings of centuries, they learned to be true to themselves in the face of death, and adopted in their hearts as well as their minds the maxim: "Better a broken jade than a whole tile."

Our own relations with the Chinese have been exceptionally friendly since the day in 1783 when Robert Morris wrote to John Jay: "I am sending some ships to China, in order to encourage others in the adventurous pursuits of commerce." The commerce was profitable and the adventurers returned with stores of tea, silks, shawls, wallpapers, paintings—and porcelain so exquisite that in our country porcelain became known simply by the name "China."

Emperor Condescends to Trade

The Emperor of China of that day, examining certain mechanical inventions brought by traders to exchange for the products of his cultivated empire, commented in a manner that prefigured the destiny of his country until the present century. Through his officials, the Emperor superbly stated:

"Our empire produces all that we ourselves need. Your mechanical toys do not interest us in the least. But since our tea, rhubarb and silk seem to be necesary to the very existence of the barbarous Western peoples, we will, imitating the clemency of heaven who tolerates all sorts of simpletons on this globe, condescend to allow a limited amount of trading through the port of Canton."

The Emperors and the people of China continued to despise the mechanical inventions of the Western world and to look down on soldiers. Since a considerable portion of the inventiveness of the Western world was devoted to the development of instruments of war, China became less and less equipped to combat foreign aggressors.

It was not until the birth of the Chinese Republic that the government of China fully faced the fact that China must adopt the techniques of the West or perish. And it was not until 1927 that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek established the authority of the central government sufficiently firmly to begin large-scale modernization of China's way of life.

The ten years that followed were years of enormous progress. Industries, railroads, paved roads, schools, colleges, laboratories, hospitals, were constructed with a speed that proved that the people of China had lost none of the qualities that had created their magnificent civilization.

The physical revival of China was accompanied by a moral and spiritual renaissance: a rebirth of patriotism and of the spirit of self-sacrifice, which finally found expression in the New Life Movement under the leadership of Generalissimo and Mme. Chiang Kai-shek.

Japan Became Alarmed

China was well on the road to unity and strength—both moral and physical—when Japan struck. Indeed, one of the chief reasons why Japan attacked China in 1937 was to stop the progress that China was making. The strength of China was growing so fast that the Japanese—who know that the Chinese are superior to them not only in numbers but also in endurance and intelligence,—saw slipping away rapidly their chance to reduce China to the same condition of abject slavery that they had imposed on Korea.

There is an old and true French proverb which runs, "To govern is to foresee." Fortunately for the people of China, their generalissimo, Chiang Kai-shek, foresaw that the Japanese militarists would not permit him and his colleagues to carry out in peace their program and task of rebuilding China. In the autumn of 1934 when I talked with the generalissimo in Nanking, he predicted not only how Japan would attack and where Japan would attack, but also when the Japanese attack would be made. And he explained to me his plan to meet the attack by giving space in order to buy time—a strategy familiar to Americans, since it was the strategy that George Washington employed during our War of Independence.

The generalissimo predicted that he would lose battles but would win the war. He said that he would establish the capital of China at Chungking in Szechwan, where he now stands,, and that he would never surrender. Like Washington, he has proved himself to be not only a great general but also a great statesman. He has not surrendered. He will not surrender.

Cites Japanese Atrocities

The Japanese army which attacked China was fully equipped with all modern instruments of war; heavy artillery, tanks and airplanes. The forces of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek had no heavy artillery, no tanks, and only a handful of airplanes. The Japanese were so confident that they would win a few easy victories and that Chinese resistance then would collapse, that the Japanese prime minister, Prince Konoye, announced: "In three months China will be beaten to her knees." The Japanese won victories; but they did not win them easily. And Chinese resistance did not collapse, even though the Chinese had to meet the attacks of airplanes and tanks with nothing but rifles, hand grenades and stubborn courage.

When the Japanese discovered that although they could win battles they could not end the war, they attempted to break the Chinese spirit of resistance by the infliction of unspeakable artocities on the civilian population. Men and boys were lined up alive for bayonet practice by the Japanese soldiers. Whole towns and villages were burned and every woman in them raped. Chinese captives—civilians and soldiers alike—were soaked with gasoline and burned alive. Fifty million men, women and children were driven from their homes. But the spirit of the Chinese remained unbroken.

After nearly four years of war that spirit is still unbroken. The Japanese army has suffered a million casualties and today more than a million Japanese soldiers are bogged down in China, unable to advance to victory, unable to retreat without acknowledging defeat.

The eyes of Americans are turned toward Europe by events so tragic that we are apt to forget that for every man who has died resisting aggression in Europe; ten have died in China; and that no men have ever risen to greater heights of epic courage than have the Chinese.

By the agreement that Japan signed in Berlin on September 27, 1940, with Germany and Italy, she leagued herself with the totalitarian dictators against us and all other nations that live in freedom. We have not yet been attacked by Germany, Italy and Japan for one reason and one only—they have not been able to get at us. The British have held the forces of Germany and Italy on the other side of the Atlantic and the Chinese have kept the Japanese so fully occupied that they have hesitated to add a sea war against the British or ourselves to their land war with China. By draining the energies of Japan, the Chinese have rendered and are rendering today a far greater service to the people of the United States—and of Great Britain—than any service that we have ever rendered to them. The Chinese no less than the British are fighting battles which are the making of our security.

Pact With Soviet Ominous

During the last few months the Japanese have occupied portions of French Indo-China and have cut the railroad by which the Chinese received a large portion of the supplies they imported from ovtrseas. The Burma Road, which has become the vital Chinese line of supply for instruments of war, can now be bombarded by Japanese aviators. If Japan should be able to occupy Burma, no military supplies from overseas could reach the Chinese armies. Only the long land route to the Soviet Union would remain open, and now the Soviet Union has signed an ominous agreement with Japan. This pact in effect gives Soviet assent to Japan's seizure of the Chinese province of Manchuria, in return for Japan's assent to Soviet seizure of the Chinese province of Outer Mongolia. No one is so naive as to believe that Japan and the Soviet Union have become friends. But by this agreement those two countries have at least become brother bandits at the expense of China.

The Chinese believed that because they were fighting the Soviet Union's fight against Japan, they could count on the support of the Soviet Union to the bitter end. Now they have seen Stalin embracing Matsuoka on the platform of the railroad station in Moscow and breaking his promise to respect forever the sovereignty of China over all parts of China. They have seen the Soviet dictator promising Matsuoka that if Japan should become engaged in war—that is to say, in war with the British or ourselves — the Soviet Union would remain neutral. One hope of China has always been that in the end the Soviet Union would give China effective military support against Japan. The Chinese now see this hope in eclipse. Moreover, they are obliged to fear that even the trickle of supplies which now reaches them overland from the Soviet Union may be cut off—if Hitler so orders. For behind Stalin's agreement with Matsuoka lies Stalin's fear of Hitler.

The Soviet Pact with Japan is Hitler's gift to the Japanese militarists. Now that Hitler's army and air force are on the Rumanian frontier of the Soviet Union, ready and able to cut Stalin off from the wheat of the Ukraine and the oil of the Caucasus, the Soviet dictator, cringing in his Kremlin, takes orders from the dictator in Berlin. And Hitler want Japan to feel free from all danger of attack by the Soviet Union because he hopes that the Japanese militarists—feeling their flank protected——will, beguiled by his agents, dare at least to assault the British and Dutch possessions in the East and become involved in war with the British Empire and the United States.

Some Americans, with the same perverted view of human nature that made them consider Mussolini a great lover of peace and the Hope of Europe, have recently been dreaming of Stalin as the Great Defender of the democracies against Japan and Germany, and have been trying to seduce him into an affectionate embrace. But Stalin has preferred to embrace Matsuoka. The Soviet pact with Japan will bring some gain if it makes all American realize that the Communist state is the enemy of all men who live in freedom, and that we, as a Nation, can aid China in just one way—by helping her dircetly and doing it ourselves.

Pleads For Aid

Our Government can help by financial aid and by the effective delivery to China of arms, munitions and airplanes. We, as individuals, can help by giving all that we can give to the United China Relief.

Every dollar that is given to bind up the wounds of a Chinese soldier is a dollar given to aid a man who by fighting the fight of his own country has been contributing to the defense of all democracies. Every dollar that is given to help stamp out war epidemics of cholera, dysentery, typhus, and typhoid in China is a dollar given to strengthen the resistance of 400,000,000 people to an armed force that but for them might readily be turned against us. Every dollar that is given to build up the small cooperative industries, which are being founded in Free China to increase production for the Chinese government and the Chinese people, pays for instruments to hold in check men who have declared themselves our enemies. To help the Chinese is to help ourselves. They are fighting the battle of freedom and of free peoples, on what is literally—in a strategic sense—our Western Front.

The British and the Chinese are hard-pressed. For our own salvation we must turn all our strength into producing instruments of defense for them and for ourselves. We must not only produce, but also deliver the goods. If we hesitate and vainly hope for temporary safety, then we shall surely perish. Do we look for peace with Hitler? He honors his peace agreements by attack in the night. Do we look for mercy? He shows his mercy with a bomb.

We have heard, to be sure, a knight of Hitler's Order of the German Eeagle telling us that we ought to stop helping the British and the Chinese and then everything would be all right. We should save our skins without having to fight. We should have peace.

What sort of peace.

Tells Price of Peace

We could have peace at the price of submission to Hitler's will: At the price of accepting a puppet fuehrer in our country. We could have peace at the price of putting our churches under the heel of Hitler and our children into the hands of Goebbels for education in the creed of Satan. We could have peace at the price of abolishing our press and our right to speak our minds. We could have peace at the price of tearing up our Declaration of Independence and our Constitution. We could have peace at the price of slavery.

I think that at that price we shall never have peace. I think that there is in America something which grew here, long before Hitler's Knight of the German Eagle was born—and that is liberty. I think that out of our soil and out of our sky there has grown a freedom which has opened the gates of hope not only to the people of this country but to the peoples of all the world. And I think that we are ready—as we have always been—to fight for that freedom.

We have no longer an easy choice between peace and war. We have a choice between keeping open the life lines to Great Britain and China and supporting those countries with all our strength, or fighting alone—and soon—in this hemisphere against the united forces of the dictators—with all of Europe, Asia, Africa and the major portion of South America organized to supply their war machines. Choice? There is no choice. In self-defense, for our own preservation, whatever the consequences, we must back the British and the Chinese.

This is America where men admit no master but God. This is the country where men and women faced a savage continent to keep faith with their Creator and themselves. This is the country of the men who held their guns at Valley Forge when blood from their naked feet stained the snow. This is the country of Lincoln and Lee, of the men in blue and the men in gray. Has our marrow turned so soft that we do not dare to face the forces of incarnate evil? No!

It may be that in supporting with all our resources and all our strength the British and the Chinese, we shall have war. It may be that we shall not have war. But support them, we will! And if the dictators wish to call that war—let them remember that this is one country that has never known defeat. Let them consider that against their conspiracy will stand a fellowship of peoples that hold freedom more dear than life. Let them recall that the bugles of man's unconquerable soul will never blow retreat. Let them remember that this is America.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Coal Agency Employes May Work Sans Pay

Bituminous Coal Division's 1,000 employes are working today but there is some uncertainty whether they'll be paid for it. On Saturday the division began its new lease on life, a two-year lease. In making up the appropriation a year ago Congress approved funds to last until April 26, the day the agency was scheduled to die. Just 10 days ago the President signed a bill that continued Bituminous Coal for two more years but Congress is yet to appropriate funds to pay expenses from now until June 30, the end of the 1941 fiscal year.

The President and the Budget Bureau have recommended that $300,000 be appropriated. The consumers division would be given $28,300 of the amount. Hearings have been held before the House Appropriations Committee on the recommendation. It usually takes weeks and sometimes months to get appropriation bills through Congress and meantime the agency will have paydays to meet. It has a small amount of money in the till—perhaps enough to meet the pay roll Wednesday, but that's all.

In extending the coal agency, Congress made the consumers council division a separate agency responsible only to it. This action was no doubt repulsive to Government reorganizers and administrative experts who believe that every agency should be responsible to a Cabinet member. Paul Sifton, former deputy administrator of Wage and Hour, is acting director of the division and he probably will be appointed director by the President.

Steeholm Gets Job

It's no secret that President Roosevelt would love to see retired to private life his official representative in Congress—Hamilton Fish. Last November Hardy Steeholm ran against Fish in the Twenty-sixth New York District and put up a good fight. Steeholm, it's reported, is on the pay roll at the Office of Education. Commissioner John Studebaker may not stand in too well at the White House, but the appointment of Steeholm should make the President indebted to him, a little matter that Studebaker probably considered.

It was predicted exclusively in this column Friday that the President's order making the Ramspeck Bill effective wouldn't include legislative or judicial employes. It can now be reported on high authority that an executive order is being drafted that will extend Civil Service to the Library of Congress, Federal courts and hundreds of other employes on Capitol Hill. It seems that legislative and judicial employes were deliberately omitted from last week's order because of the many complications that need to be ironed out. Last week's order covered only employes in the executive branch.

One of the big tasks facing the Civil Service Commission in carrying out the Ramspeck order is establishment of new registers to supply eligibles for the many new and old jobs that will be brought under its jurisdiction. That means more examinations and a heavier load for the commission's examining division. New tests probably will be announced soon in many scientific and professional fields.

Postoffice Department is losing so many of its employes to defense that Postmaster General Walker is understood to be planning to ask the President to permit certain employes reaching retirement age to continue in active service. . . . A Federal employe union will make important news shortly. . . . There is more than $625,000 in the Civil Service retirement fund which is invested in Government bonds. . . . Annual leave can't be transferred if an employe switches to a temporary job.

Both the Army and Navy need nurses badly. Many girls in clerical jobs and at hospitals of the Public Health Service, St. Elizabeths Hospital, and Freedmen's Hospital among others would be more inclined to take Army or Navy jobs if they were treated like the boys who leave their Federal jobs for the armed forces. Uncle Sam requires that the jobs of the boys be held open for them. No such privilege is extended the girls. The girls are serving their country like the boys and shouldn't they be treated similarly?

Easy Come, Easy Go

Muncie, Ind., April 27 (A.P.).—A holdup man who had robbed a grocery backed through the door holding a revolver on two clerks. He backed right into the arms of two policemen.

A passing motorist had seen the holdup and notified the officers.

Objector Changes Mind

Sebring, Fla., April 27 (A.P.).—Last November a Highlands County man filed affidavits with the local draft board to prove he was conscientiously opposed to war. He was granted exemption.

Yesterday the man appeared and announced he was ready to report when called. He said ominous reports of the war had washed away his antiwar feeling.

Dedication, Prayers for Ireland, Shower of Gold Fill Church Day

In center picture, Janet Owens, 4, of Kensington, drops her contribution into the pot at the "shower of gold" service yesterday at the Ninth Street Christian Church. Holding her is Mrs. Joseph Brashears, also of Kensington. The service climaxed the church's golden jubilee celebration and contributions go to the church debt fund. 1 Dead, 12 Hurt, Including 2 Police, in D. C. Area Traffic

Traffic accidents in the Washington area yesterday caused one death and sent a dozen persons, including two District policemen, to hospitals for treatment.

Lewis Martin, 55, a carpenter of Fairfax, Va., was killed instantly early in the day when he was struck by an automobile while walking on Lee Highway, several miles west of Fairfax. Irving J. Breeden, Route 3, Manassas, driver of the car, said he was blinded by headlights of an approaching automobile. He was exonerated of blame by Dr. T. B. McCord, Fairfax County coroner.

The two District policemen were in their scout car waiting for a red light on Fourteenth Street just south of S Street Northwest when the accident occurred. Police said a car driven by Harold L. Barkley, colored, 23, 1227 Twenty-third Street Northwest, passed through the red light colliding with the scout car, which was responding to an accident at Fourteenth Street and Florida Avenue Northwest.

Private Wade B. Riley, 31, of 265 Crest Road, Cheverly, Md., driver, escaped with slight injuries but Prvt. Roger Randall, 39, of 901 K Street Northeast, was admitted to Emergency Hospital and treated for a wrenched back. Barkley received first aid treatment at Freedman's Hospital.

Three persons received minor injuries when the driver of a car fell asleep, shortly after midnight Saturday, according to police, and drove his car over the curb on Nebraska Avenue just above Ward Circle Northwest and collided with a tree. The driver, Reuben Cohen, 2415 Minnesota Avenue Southeast, escaped injury. Three passengers received minor injuries. They were: Mamie Eisenberg, 17, of 249 Eleventh Street Southeast, treated for laceration of chest and possible fractured nose; Marion Danoff, 18, of 712 Tuckerman Street Northwest, abrasion of both legs, possible fracture of right leg, and Daniel Cohen, 25, of 431 Decatur Street Northwest, possible fracture of right ankle. All were treated at Georgetown Hospital and released.

The accident at Fourteenth Street and Florida Avenue Northwest, where the police scout car was going when involved in the crash, sent a taxicab passenger to Garfield Hospital. Blanche Crumpler, 29, 904 Shepherd Street Northwest, was treated for a sprained back and sent home. The cab was driven by John F. Fanning, 30, 904 Shepherd Street Northwest. Frank D. Gallagher, 27, Receiving Station, Navy Yard, operator of the second car, was charged with passing a red light by police.

Pedestrian Injured

Leon Bibbs, colored, 57, of 1209 Thirteenth Street Northwest, was treated for possible fracture of right leg, ribs and skull and shock at Emergency Hospital, where he was taken after being hit by an automobile as he walked to the curb from a street car loading platform at Twenty-fifth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest. Operator of the car was Sterling R. Alford, 25, of 1733 Q Street Northwest. Bibbs was admitted to the hospital.

Juanita Pippin, 25, of 215 Third Street Northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital for lacerations to the lower lip and sprain to lower spine. The auto of Alexander Salak, 43, of 2931 Yost Place Northeast, collided with the car in which Miss Pippin was a passenger in the 3100 block of Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast. Salak was charged at No. 11 precinct with driving while drunk.

An accident at Nichols and Alabama Avenue Southeast in the morning sent Charles N. Hess, 40, of 3612 Horner Place Southeast, to Mount Alto Hospital where he was treated for abrasions to the left knee and left forearm. His car and that of Webster M. Courtney, 26, of Oxon Hill, Md., figured in the collision. Courtney was charged with driving on the wrong side of the street.

Mount Ranier Woman Hurt

Two persons were injured in an accident at Nevada and Nebraska Avenues Northwest. Mitzie Rice, 27, of 3534 Thirty-fourth Street, Mount Ranier, Md., was treated for a possible fractured neck, strained muscles and possible internal injuries at Emergency Hospital. Her condition is not serious but she was admitted. John Klein, also a passenger in car received minor injuries.

Both were passengers in a car driven by Robert Durham, 30, of Silver Spring, Md.

Mrs. Beatrice Contreras, 38, of 509 Peabody Street Northwest, wife of the chancellor of the Mexican Embassy, was reported in an improved condition at Casualty Hospital yesterday. She was taken to the hospital Saturday after an auto accident on the Washington-Baltimore Boulevard near Muirkirk.

Richard V. Pollard, 48, and his wife, Lelia, 44, of 128 C Street Northeast, were injured when their car collided with another automobile on St. Barnabus Church Road, near Oxon Hill. They were taken to Providence Hospital.

Job Training Is Promised By Dr. Ballou

A program of defense job training in District schools, to include courses for women to replace men called to the draft, and for men to take white-collar as well as manual defense jobs, was promised yesterday by Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou.

Returning from a two-week tour of Pacific Coast cities with other school superintendents, during which he viewed extensive school training programs for defense production, Ballou said "every effort to expand vocational training for jobs in national defense production will be undertaken immediately in the Washington public schools."

Plans for an intensified local program, which may involve 24-hour training shifts in all District vocational schools and high school workshops, will be announced as soon as he has consulted with his high school faculty heads, the superintendent said.

U. S. to Bear Cost

Training programs for older men and women are expected to be added to the defense curriculum, Ballou predicted. Cost of the stepped-up program, he said, will be borne by the Federal Government and "it will not be relatively large, as existing facilities will be used and expanded."

Shortage of machines and other equipment and lack of space and qualified teachers, are "the most serious problems facing the schools in any contemplated expansion of defense job training," Ballou said, in discussing the school superintendent's tour.

He emphasized that "the seriousness of the national defense production situation is such that no stone will be left unturned here in expansion into every possible field of training for both men and women as workers in defense industries."

Tome to Look Ahead

The tour, which was taken by 17 school executives from all parts of the country, started in Los Angeles on April 14 and closed in Seattle on April 22. It included visits to vocational schools participating in aircraft and ship-building training courses in California, a four-day conference in Yosemite National Park, and examination of the Seattle school training program.

Beside the present need for trained defense workers, "there is need now to look ahead to the future and to visualize, if possible, the vocational and other services that will be required of District schools when the defense production emergency has passed, Ballou pointed out.

"Perhaps we can best prepare for this through strengthening and expanding our regular vocational courses," he concluded.

D. C. Baptists Dedicate New Sunday School

Members of East Washington Heights Baptist Church yesterday dedicated their new 40-room Sunday school structure, and heard the project called an example of America's real defense.

Preaching in the church adjoining the new building at Branch and Alabama Avenue Southeast, Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden said the building of America's spiritual defenses is more important than military defenses. He is pastor of the First Baptist Church and former Washington Federation of Churches' president.

Dr. Pruden spoke shortly before Clifford H. Jenkins, Sunday School superintendent and building committee chairman, received the new building keys from E. Burton Corning, architect, then in turn handed them over to R. L. Jenkins, his brother, and chairman of the church board.

The Rev. Glenn B. Faucett, pastor, conducted the dedication service, at which the prayers were led by Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention.

George B. Fraser brought greetings on behalf of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention, of which he is president; the Rev. Charles B. Austin, pastor of West Washington Baptist Church, gave the invocation, and the Rev. W. Bertram King, pastor of Fountain Memorial Baptist Church, the benediction.

Members of many neighborhood churches joined in the dedication, and afterward inspected the modern, well-equipped educational unit, Dr. J. P. Gulley spoke.

Church Visitation Night will be celebrated at 7:45 p. m. today, when congregations of the Trans-Eastern Council of Churches will be guests of honor.

Two Small Boys Bitten by Dogs

Two Washington boys were severely bitten by dogs yesterday as they played near their homes.

Most seriously injured was William Sisson, 7, 604 Sixth Street Southwest, who was treated at Emergency Hospital for wounds to the face, arms, shoulders and neck. The dog, a neighbor's Boston bull, was held for examination by health authorities.

Joseph Hickerson, 5, of 817 Fifth Street Northwest, was bitten on the left knee by another dog. He was also treated at Emergency Hospital.

WeddingRings, Trinkets Aid Church Fund

Aiding the church debt fund, 500 members of Ninth Street Christian Church yesterday dropped wedding rings, checks, cash, gold-rimmed glasses and other possessions into a black pot after the morning services.

Mingling at the culmination service of the church's golden jubilee fete, they brought gifts that overflowed the receptacle, which rested on a table with a framed color picture of the church at Ninth and D Streets Northeast.

Many cherished articles were given at the "shower of gold" rites. Because she felt it would be his wish, Mrs. Stanley H. Ridings contributed her late hubsand's Masonic emblem. Before his death in 1932, he was Master of Federal Lodge No. 1.

Wallace W. Kirby conducted the "shower" and also joined with Arthur G. Bishop, chairman of the church official board, in giving communion.

Preaching his concluding sermon as ad interim minister, the Rev. Lowell C. McPherson challenged his hearers not to be satisfied with the achievements of the past, but to look forward to many more years of service to the community.

"Christian loyalty," he said, "is the only way to effect that Christian unity for which the world is yearning."

The worship service was led by Dr. Carroll C. Roberts, new pastor. In his announcements, he praised the work of the Junior Board of Deacons, with whom he met on Saturday night. "It is one of the finest things I've ever seen in a church," he said.

The junior board took up the offering, and the senior board served the communion bread and wine.

Eire Minister Joins Prayer For Preservation of Peace

Irish prayers for peace are not motivated by fear, but by a long unsatisfied desire for a more peaceful state of things, the Rev. John J. Reilly said yesterday at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University. He is director of the Shrine.

He preached before the Irish Minister, Robert Brennan, representatives of Irish-American organizations, and others at a solemn high mass. Prayers had been asked for the preservation of Ireland's neutrality.

"The Irish may look contrary praying for peace," he said, "but the truth is that none loved peace more, yet had so little of it. Every artist who tried to symbolize the Irish must include a kneeling figure."

Declaring that the Irish were praying not only for peace, but also for guidance, Father Reilly said "they are in a bit of a dilemma—a dilemma that cannot be clearly seen through smiling Irish eyes."

"Other nations of the world make their own decisions, so let the Irish nation make its own," he continued. "Ireland, as a nation, has not had many chances to decide what might be of world-wide significance—perhaps the world would not be so badly off if Ireland had had these chances in the past.

"At any rate," he continued, "Ireland's record is clean, and there are not too many nations in the world of which the same holds true. None can criticize the Irish for refusing to be moved by promises. There are as many broken promises in Irish hostory as there are heroes' graves beneath the Irish sacred soil."

The mass was celebrated by the Right Rev. Thomas G. Smyth, rector of the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament. Assisting were the Rev. T. N. McCarthy, of St. Ann's; the Rev. Timothy Hanlon, O. F. M., of the Franciscan Monastery, and the Rev. Walter J. Schmidz, S. S., of the Sulpician Seminary. The Most Rev. Michael Keyes, titular bishop, of Aeropolis, of the Marist College, attended. The 48-voiced choir of the Augustinian College, the university, sang mass.

American Indian Takes His Life In Apartment Here

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday in the death Saturday night of Chester Hill, 55, whose body was found on the kitchen floor of his apartment at 3220 Seventeenth Street Northwest. Police said all five gas jets of a stove were wide open when they arrived.

Hill, an American Indian, had been senior freight rate examiner with the General Accounting Office for seven years, according to his employer, L. E. Noe, 523 Shepherd Street Northwest. Noe said the man left work Saturday afternoon in "good spirits and seemed to be perfectly normal."

Philip M. Whelan, who lived directly above Hill, smelled gas and called police. Dr. B. L. Naiman pronounced the man dead. Dr. Christopher Murphy, deputy coroner, said Hill's wife, Mrs. Bertha Hill, was in Atlantic City and was notified of her husband's death. He said three notes were found.

D.C. Selectees' Exams May Be Earlier

Army Trying Plan To Give Tests Before Leaving for Camp, Averting Loss of Jobs

Selectees from the District may be given Army physical examinations before reporting to camps for induction, if this system proves successful in tests during May in Pennsylvania, the War Department disclosed yesterday.

At present, they do not receive such examinations until they report to induction centers. As a result some, after quitting their jobs, have found themselves rejected.

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, District of Columbia director of Selective Service, yesterday urged Washington registrants and selectees to protect their civilian jobs "by keeping employers informed of your Selective Service status."

"Complete cooperation between employes and employers at all times is imperative to insure civilian jjob protections for the registrants," Gen. Cox said.

Each registrant, he pointed out, "should advise his employer promptly as to how he has been classified for Selective Service, when he expects to be called for training, and then as to what are his plans after he has had experience in military life."

The service act, Cox reminded registrants, provides civilian job protection to every man inducted into the military service. If he makes application within 40 days after he has completed his year of training and is still qualified to perform the duties of his civilian job, the law says he shall be restored "to such position, or to a position of like seniority, status and pay unless the employer's circumstances have so changed as to make it unreasonable or impossible to do so."

"Keep in touch with your civilian job," he said. "If you are learning something that will make you more valuable to your employer when you return, it is to your interest as well as theirs to tell them about it," he added.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

The Warner Brothers Round Up Plays, Books

Producers Guard Against 'Coming of the Day;' 'Fantasia' Opens May 12, as 'Road Show;' This, That and the Other About the Theater

THE WARNER BROTHERS—Harry, Abe and Jack—seem to be forward-looking lads. In anticipation of the new motion picture selling system, that becomes operative soon as a result of long and labored litigation, they have stepped out and played safe by acquiring 17 stage and book successes against the time when good screen stories will be hard to get.

BELL

Among the stage hits that have been preempted by the Freres W., are "Arsenic and Old Lace," produced by Russel Crouse and Howard Lindsay, authors of "Life With Father;" "The Corn Is Green," Ethel Barrymore's triumphant vehicle by Emlyn Williams; "The Man Who Came to Dinner" and "George Washington Slept Here," both by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart, and "Old Acquaintance," the Jane Cowl-Peggy Wood costarrer, by John van Druten.

Now, if you care to go into the publishing field, the works wangled by the Warners include "Saratoga Trunk," by Edna Ferber; "Background to Danger" and "Coffin for Dmitries," two English best-sellers by Eric Ambler; "The Gay Sisters," by Stephen Longstreet; "In This Our Life," Ellen Glasgow's latest; "Mississippi Bells," by Clements Ripley; "The Damned Don't Cry," novel by Harry Hervey; "Nine Lives Are Not Enough," murder-mystery by Jerome Odlum; "Not Nocturne," by Edwin Gilbert—this might be a play instead of a book—"The Widow of Devil's Island," "The Widow Wouldn't Weep," by Dalton Trumbo, and "Beyond the Blue Horizon," by Comdr. Frank Wead, now in production as "Dive Bomber," costarring Errol Flynn and Fred MacMurray.

You'll have to count 'em. I don't know whether that adds up to 17 or not, never having being any good at even so simple a thing as simple arithmetic.

In addition to this stage and printing press material, the Warners have several important original screen plays in work. Foremost among these are "Yankee Doodle Dandy," the story of George M. Cohan's life and songs, with Jimmy Cagney in the Cohan role, and the story of Alvin C. York, filmed under the title of "Sergeant York," with Gary Cooper in the title role.

Facts About "Fantasia"

As was rather more than intimated in Sunday's column, the premiere of "Fantasia" will be celebrated in the National Theater on Monday night, May 12, instead of May 13 or 14, as originally confusingly announced. The earlier opening is due to the fact that the RCA and Disney engineers have discovered that the installation of sound and projection equipment at the National is not so serious a problem as they had at first suspected. Then, there are some other considerations, too, but they do not so much matter. There will be two performances daily, at 2:30 and 8:30 p. m., once the thing gets going. Matinee prices will be 55 cents, 75 cents and $1.10. Nights will be 75 cents, $1 and $1.65. All seats will be reserved.

"Fantasia," now in its seventh month in the Broadway Theater, in New York, is something new in motion pictures. It is a collaboration by Walt Disney, Leopold Stokowski and Deems Taylor, who pooled their enormous talents and created two-and-a-half-hours of something or other the like of which never has been seen before. If its controversial qualities can make a picture great, "Fantasia" should be a world-beater.

And that reminds me. Miss Antoinette Spitzer, in town to do the "Fantasia" cymbal-whanging for the next month, resents being denominated "an improved, identical twin of Ann Corio's." It is Toni's contention that heretofore she always has been mistaken for Gypsy Rose Lee and sees no reason now why the matter should be complicated by dragging in Ann at this late date. Obeisance, genuflections and the back of the hand to all these tempermental and truculent temptresses is what I alwyas say. Well, almost always, if you have to split hairs. And splitting hairs is a pretty delicate business. After all, Lincoln only split rails.

Must We Listen to Another?

Gene Ford, managing director of Loew's Capitol Theater, producer and song-writer, is ruefully rumored to be composing a sequel to his recent "Cherry Blossom Time," the blooming official melody of the bursting of buds around the Tidal Basin. This new conception of Mr. Ford's concerns itself with the month beginning Thursday and will bear the title of "Maytime is Loewtime in Three-Four Time"—which seems title enough for any ballad. One suspicions that it has been prompted by the forthcoming showings on Loew screens of "The Road to Zanzibar," "The People Vs. Dr. Kildare," "That Hamilton Woman," "Billy the Kid," "I Wanted Wings" and other releases from the M.-G.-M., Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists and Paramount studios. They might be worth some sort of chromatic choral, at that.

Signs-of-the-Times Note

Hollywood, April 27.

Extension of United States protection to Greenland has a special interest for the Hollywoodians who invaded those bleak shores back in 1932 to make Universal's "S O S Iceberg."

HOPPER

Gibson Gowland (remember the lumbering McTeague of Von Stroheim's "Greed?") was a "survivor" of "S O S Iceberg," the toughest location trip ever made. "The shooting and acting were the easiest part," Gowland told me out at Warner's, where I spotted him working in an extra crowd for a scene in "Sergeant York." "We lived on ice floes for months, and our food was dropped to us from an airplane by a stunt flier named Ernest Udets."

Herr Udets, if you've forgotten, now happens to be production chief of the German air force, so I guess he's now remembering his "S. O. S. Iceberg" days, too.

For years Hollywood's tried to get around the Hays' ban on "The Shanghai Gesture." Now I understand Arnold Pressburger, who made those foreign pictures, has gotten around it. Understand Luise Rainer will be starred, and Dolores del Rio would like to play Madam Goddam. Would that be a set-up! That same part once cost Blanche Bates (Mrs. George I Creel) $50,000—because she wouldn't go as far afield as China to play that kind of a part.

When Goldwyn was testing Hattie McDaniel and Louise Beavers for the Mammy in "Little Foxes," Jessie Grayson, a member of the Hall Johnson Choir, heard about it, got into the Goldwyn studio, asked to see the boss. Sam saw her, ordered a test, and she's got the part. Asked how she managed it, she said, "I didn't have an agent. I heerd they was testin', so I just thought I'd get tested, too, and I did!"

Now that Oscar Serlin ("Life With Father") is en route to Hollywood, don't be surprised if Sam Wood gets the cushy job of putting that wonderful play on the screen. Everybody in town wants it, but Oscar is very sympathetic toward Sammy . . . I asked Benny Rubin, who hasn't been getting the breaks lately, why he didn't have his nose bobbed, as his pals have been doing. He said, "What? And starve as a juvenile? I make more money starving as a comedian." Producer Wilcox saw the light when Rubin played a seal trainer who looked and acted like his protege, in "Sugny." The preview audience screamed and yelled for more Benny Rubin, so his part was padded and he got another week's work.

'Men in White' Ably Acted By the Civic

By Nelson B. Bell

The Washington Civic Theater definitely has recovered the niche to which it is entitled in the Capital's theatrical scheme of things. The prospect was a trifle dubious at the time of its lamentable excursion into the futile field of musical "satire" that failed to satirize, but almost complete justification has come since. It is probably rank injustice even to resurrect memories of that musical debacle. But it does serve as a basis upon which to base judgment of the amazing "bounce" with which the Civic has returned to its former prestige, under the shrewd direction of Leon Askin.

First, as I remember it, there was "The Gentle People," as a bit of a straw in the wind. Then came Shaw's "The Applecart," which was by no means tipped over. And now "Men in White."

I would not be sure that the Sidney Kingsley play of hospitals, doctors, internes and nurses comprises the ideal footlight fare for Washington in the spring, but I am sure that the play that elicited such enthusiastic Broadway encomiums was given an admirable production in Wardman Park Theater last night, where it will run for a week—barring a dark Thursday night.

"Men in White" is no easy chore for any semiprofessional acting group. It involves a tremendous number of characters and its three acts encompass nine scenes. It is a shade too clinical and a little too saturated with the fumes of ether to be wholly delightful, but it is, at the same time, instinct with tense drama, romance and a vagrant touch of comedy. It all came off exceedingly well last night—especially the operating-room scene.

Surgery Takes a Bow

An operating-room scene, of course, is an operating-room scene and may fall something short of the mass view of enlivening entertainment, but as Mr. Askin has manipulated the intricate problem it served more or less as the tour de force of last evening's performance—which, incidentally, was given before an audience of more meager proportions than the merit of the play and the proficiency of its cast deserved.

Among those in the principal roles, it seemed to this observer that Paul Bradbury Walter, Lawrence Beckerman, Ted Tenley, Elizabeth Winburn, Mary Jackson, Audrey Henshaw and Charles Baker, in the pivotal role of Dr. Ferguson, gave the best accounts of themselves. This, however would not be to overlook the excellent support contributed by Dudley Sadler, Madeline Raven, Murray Sheehan, Eileen Fowler, Joe Bourne and the others in Mr. Askin's elongated roster of players.

The between-scenes intervals and the intr'actes were vastly too long, but in essence "Men in White" indicated beyond dispute that the Civic Theater is itself again.

Trans-Lux

Just trot right around to the Trans-Lux Theater for the current program if there is the slightest doubt in your mind concerning the outcome of this war. After you see the marvelous defense preparations by land and sea in and around Singapore, plus the pepping-up of already knife-edged morale of the British by Churchill, not to mention the miraculous activity of the Australian troops, you may rest assured this war is far from over.

Probably the most interesting and right-to-home defense pictures are those showing the start of civilian air defense around New York. Civilians, both men and women, spot enemy planes, and through radio and telephone, cooperation Mitchell Field pilots sweep the skies with Uncle Sam's bombers. Australian air forces, on parade, plus one-hour recruits, paint a thrilling picture, while in London new community nurseries are opened to allow mothers to do war work. Churchill guides Ambassador Winant through bombed areas.

At Fort Myer, the trackless tank is put through its paces, as mechanized cavalry plus the horses stage a realistic maneuver at Fort Bliss, Tex. United States sailors are given a grand party in Australia, and at Berwick, Pa., 12-ton tanks are speeding off the runway for the Army.

The Mexican earthquake is pictured, as contrasted to unusual aquatic pictures of the Florida college girls swimming team. Sports include Washington State outrowing California; the Boston annual marathon; Silent Witness winning at Jamaica; California glider contest and Fort Meade boxing bouts.

More captivating than ever before are the Dione Quintuplets in their newest short feature. "The Life of an Ant" brings to the screen extraordinary scenes enlarged more than 3,000 times. The cartoon of the week is "The Land of Fun."

Gayety

With the end of the current burlesque season not far away, the management of the Gayety continues to bring here some of the outstanding personalities playing the circuit. This week, for instance, Miss Marion Miller, "Queen of the Shiver," and Charles Kemper, versatile comedian, head the cast of a production that ranks among the best seen here since last September.

This is Miss Miller's second season with Mr. Hirst, and yet, in that short space of time, she has proved herself tremendously popular with burlesque fans. In the current revue, Marion's musical specialties are nothing short of sensational.

Aside from the charming Miss Miller, the show boasts such devastating beauties as Beth Calvert, Carol King, JoAnn Randall and Jean Lee. Miss Calvert displays one of the finest voices heard here recently, while Miss Lee's beauty parades are in a class of their own.

Cooper was deemed the only Hollywood actor capable of doing justice to the role of Sergt. Alvin C. York, hero of the First World War, and the up-and-coming Miss Leslie was elevated to costardom with him as a reward of merit

Leonard Lyons:

IN WASHINGTON, it was indicated that Fiorello LaGuardia will reconsider his declining the home defense post. And his acceptance will not necessarily mean that he'd resign as Mayor of the City of New York . . . Mr. Justice William O. Douglas, whose departure from the bench is expected to take place in June, will not move into an emergency job—but into one which has more permanence . . . The next issue of Partisan Review will report, in an uncensored dispatch from Paris, that a high Nazi official in Paris offered Picasso the princely gift of three tons of coal, because the German officers are collecting Picasso's paintings. The artist refused to make the deal, and assured: "I can freeze as well as anybody."

"RE YOUR STORY about a reporter named Dillon submitting a $250 item for entertaining Gen. Pershing—that the A. E. F. censors refused to pass it, and Dillon admitted it wasn't true," writes Daniel Dillon, of the Department of Justice. "The reporter described is myself. I was the first accredited correspondent for I. N. S., with the A. E. F. This tale is ridiculous. My expense account was sent to the Paris office and I was reimbursed directly from there. My whole expense account for any month did not amount to $250. I do not resent too much the fact that I was accused of padding my expense account, as it is well known that this is an essential ingredient in the preparation of this tasty dish. But what does irritate me is that I should be humiliated by the charge that I did it so unskillfully."

CLIFFORD FISCHER'S International Revue, which will start its Pan-American tour in Rio in July, is being financed by Macoco's family . . . Honeychil' Wilder attended the Bill Ellsworth party at El Morocco—where a pearl in each oyster served the ladies was promised. Miss Wilder accidentally bit into the pearl and then swallowed it . . . Dick Himber's movie work for Warners will begin May 7 . . . Three years ago Nunnally Johnson completed a script for Darryl Zanuck, called "Mr. Nickelby Sits Down." It concerned an employer who becomes so interested in his workers' strike against him that he joins them in the strike and helps them win. Zanuck decided that this wouldn't make a good movie story and shelved the script. And that's the plot of the new Jean Arthur-Charles Coburn hit movie, "The Devil and Miss Jones"

LAST YEAR Elizabeth Hawes, the fashion designer, decided to streamline the judicial robe worn by the members of the United States Supreme Court. She designed a robe jacket, which reached only to the hips—because that's the only portion which spectators can see when the jurists are on the bench. In addition, Miss Hawes proposed to have a distinguished numeral on each jacket—like football players have. . . . "And on unanimous decisions," said one member of that court, "we can all get into a huddle, spell out 's-u-p-r-e-m-e,' and add a 'Yeah, Team!'"

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON Albert Einstein met Maurice Maeterlinck at the home of Dr. Bucky. The luncheon was arranged by Dr. Saul Colin, the theatrical producer . . . "I'm glad Maeterlinck didn't speak about science," said Einstein, later . . . "I am so elated," Maeterlinck confessed, "that Einstein didn't once mention the words 'Blue Bird' " . . . Einstein presented to Dr. Colin one of the biographies written about him. On the fly-leaf, in German, Einstein wrote: "This book's about me—but that's not the worst . . . What was in my brain—the author reversed."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 27 (INS).—The 1941 youngsters are the most promising lot of potential stars that have ever come out of Hollywood. There isn't a studio that isn't grooming some talented boy or girl for stardom. James Craig, who made his debut in "Kitty Foyle," is RKO's pride and joy. He'll be starred in "Valley of The Sun," a George Marshall production. Titian-haired Joan Leslie, 16-year-old Warner discovery, has already been acclaimed a star. She's just finished emoting as Gary Cooper's leading lady in "Sergeant York." Kathryn Grayson is M.-G.-M.'s best movie news since Lana Turner walked on the lot. The little Grayson girl, who sings like a lark, has success written in her future book.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Paramount is pinning its hopes on Veronica Lake and Susanna Foster, another little girl with the voice of an angel. Jane Russell and John Buetel make their debut in "The Outlaw" and Howard Hughes will not let their fame die. Todd Karns, Roscoe's boy, gets his chance with Leo McCarey. Republic is sponsoring Mary Lee, another gifted young singer. So it goes, with every studio having a newcomer in reserve. The present stars cannot go on forever and, furthermore, there are not names for all the movies planned, so you will see many new faces in 1941.

Before Jack Benny has finished jumping from studio to studio for all the pictures he's wanted for, he'll feel like a traveling salesman. Warners have put in a bid for Jackson (as Phil Harris venemously calls him) for "Male Animal" but, in the meantime, Rochester's boss also read "The Widow Wouldn't Weep," another Warner property and likes it better.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Danny Winkler and his former bride, Jean Rogers, at the rhumboogie acting as if they had never parted; Mitzi Green, who just flew in from New York on her way to Honolulu, has become a pretty girl. She was at the Mocambo with a dark, good-looking boy; who was the beautiful blonde dancing with Gene Markey at the same place?

Lee Marshall flies to San Francisco Monday to meet Herbert Marshall, who has been giving Aid to Britain benefits all over the country; Kay (Tillie the Toiler) Harris and Jack Clark of the Hollywood Plaza Hotel, are talking things over; Don Alvarado and the very pretty Lucia Carroll, keeping engagements at the Grace Hayes lodge; Leo Carrillo is hosting one of his famous roundups at his ranch Sunday; Bob Taylor and Barbara Stanwyck leave tomorrow on the S. S. America for their vacation jaunt.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Holy Name Union Elects McDonagh

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., April 27.—Clarence McDonagh, Hughesville, Md., head of the Southern Maryland section, was elected president of the Union of the Holy Name Societies of the Archdioceses of Baltimore and Washington, at the thirtieth annual convention of the society in the auditorium of Frederick High School this afternoon. He succeeds John N. Kunkle, Bel Air, Md.

The 716 delegates representing nearly 100,000 Catholic men in Maryland and the District of Columbia, were urged to pray for peace by the Right Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Washington, who addressed the convention. He compared the peaceful Maryland countryside with scenes in war-torn Europe and stated that "if democracy" is to be saved in America" we"ll have to put God first."

Reports Sumbitted

Reports from the various sections making up the Archdiocesan Union were submitted by Walter Gies, Annapolis, for Annapolis section; John Langan, Cumberland, for Western Maryland; McDonagh for Southern Maryland; William Kehoe, Washington, for Washington section; Thomas J. Kenney, Baltimore, for Baltimore, and Guy Baker, Emmitsburg, for central Maryland. The reports showed a membership of 85,965 adults and 14,996 juniors.

A resolution was adopted pledging continued support to the Legion of Decency in its fight on indecent literature and unmiral screen and stage plays, and asking "an honorable peace based on the principles of the Popes." The resolution was submitted by William H. Collins, Baltimore.

A report of the 1940 convention held in Washington last April was presented by Dr. Edward Doehler, Baltimore. Activities of the junior Holy Name Society for youths between 12 and 18 were outlined by Fred R. Ulrich, Baltimore.

Attendance at the convention set a new record. According to Ralph Powers, Baltimore, registrar, 716 dellegates and 1,348 visitors jammed the auditorium. Sixty-seven spiritual directors also were in attendance.

Kunkle, retiring as president, was presented a framed resolution commending his efforts, by the Rev. Joseph M. Moran, spiritual director of the Washington section.

McDonagh said aims of his administration will be more frequent reception of communion, and the fostering of retreats. Remarks were also made by Msgr. Harry A. Quinn, Baltimore, archdiocesan spiritual director.

The convention opened this morning with Solemn High Mass in St. John's Church at 11 o'clock, celebrated by the Rev. Leander Yoest, O. M. C. A., pastor of Saints Peter and Paul Church, Cumberland, with the Rev. John L. Gipproch, S. J., of St. Aloysius Church, Leonardtown, deacon, the Rev. Lawrence McGlone, of the Church of the Nativity, Washington, subdeacon, and the Rev. Arthur C. Slade, assistant pastor of St. John's Church, as master of ceremonies. Sermon was preached by the Rev. Camillus A. Mussleman, O. P., Washington.

Child Dies; Bereft Kin Had Tried Suicide

Neil Daniels, 64-year-old Fairfax County painter, who attempted suicide late Saturday because of grief over the serious illness of a 4-year-old granddaughter, was reported to be improving at Alexandria Hospital last night, unaware of the fact that the child had died only a short time after he had fired a .32-caliber revolver bullet into his head.

Hospital authorities said his condition was "satisfactory," but added "his case is one of those that must be watched carefully from day to day."

Vernon Daniels, 22, father of the child who died Saturday night at Children's Hospital of a stomach tumor, said his father had been conscious most of the day. "We didn't tell him about Dorothy May, though," he said, "because in his condition it might cause him more trouble."

The elder Daniels shot himself while seated on the front porch of a home he shared with his son's family in the 2700 block of Duke Street, just outside Alexandria's city limits, a few minutes after his son and daughter-in-law had been summoned to the bedside of their daughter.

Funeral services for Dorothy May will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, at Dellinger's funeral home, at Woodstock, Va., the home of her mother. She will be buried in the Shenandoah Valley, near Dietrich, Va.

Funeral Today For Mrs. Oliver, Mother of Seven

Funeral services for Mrs. Elenor Agnes Oliver, 78, a resident of the District for more than 50 years, will be held today at 2 p. m., in All Saints' Episcopal Church, 594 Minnesota Avenue Northeast.

Mrs. Oliver, who died Friday night at her home, 598 Minnesota Avenue Northeast, was the wife of Peter R. Oliver, retired yardmaster of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who served at the Benning station for 52 years.

The mother of seven children, she was a native of Montgomery County, Md.

Mrs. McMullen Is Dead at 92 In Georgetown

A District woman, 92, who witnessed the burning of Abingdon, Va., by Union troops during the Civil War and was a direct descendant of several American pioneers and statesmen, died here early yesterday.

She was Mrs. Lavalette Johnston McMullen, daughter of former United States Senator Judge John Warfield Johnston, who represented Virginia from 1869-83. Mrs. McMullen died after a brief illness early yesterday in her home 1615 Thirty-fifth Street Northwest.

Born in Tazewell, Va., in 1850, she was a great-grandniece if Patrick Henry and her grandfather was John Floyd, twice a Governor of Virginia and a Member of Congress, 1815-1829.

She is survived by four daughters, the Misses Mary F., Laetitia J. and Nicketti McMullien and Mrs. W. Arnold Brinkman, all of Washington; three sons, John F., of San Francisco, and Joseph B. and Dysart, of Washington. Also surviving are a brother and sister, Col. Joseph B. Johnston and Miss Caralie Johnston, of Richmond.

A requiem mass for Mrs. McMullen will be held in Holy Trinity Church here at 10 a. m. tomorrow. She will be buried in the New Cathedral Cemetery, Baltimore, Md.

"Let us teach the country how to meet the crises that are coming," he said. "Let us bring back a militant Christianity to the land we love."

J. J. Esch Dies; Ex-Wisconsin Representative

La Crosse, Wis., April 27 (AP).—John J. Esch, 80, Republican Representative from the Seventh Congressional District from 1898 to 1920 and former member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, died at his home today.

A graduate of the University of Wisconsin, where he was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Esch attained national prominence as a coauthor of the Transportation Act of 1920.

He was appointed a member of the Commerce Commission by President Harding and served as chairman of that body in 1921. His nomination for reappointment by President Coolidge in 1928 caused a wide split in Congressional circles and, eventually, the Senate rejected the appointment.

He remained in Washington to practice law, retiring in 1938 and returning to La Crosse. While residing in Washington he was an active member of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church and the Board of Trade. He was a former president of American Peace Society and of Association of Practitioners before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Sundra, Travis Star as Nats Defeat Yanks, 6-3

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, April 27.—TRAVIS' SLUMP—Cecil Travis was the picture of utter futility in his last two times at bat this afternoon and his batting average fell below .600. Travis is hitting only .588 for the season.

POVICH

Earlier in the day, though, Travis looked like a pretty good hitter. He tripled to left and doubled to right twice in his first three times at bat and his season's average at that point was .630, but he flunked out in his last two trips to the plate.

Maybe Travis shouldn't be criticized, though. When he stepped to the plate this afternoon, he was only 24 hours out of a sick bed where he had been running a 104 fever concurrent with an attack of ptomaine poisoning. His body was still covered by a bright red rash. Bucky Harris has hopes that Travis will recover his batting eye.

Said Harris today, after Travis' third straight hit: "Now if that guy would only contract typhoid fever with a bit of triple pneumonia thrown in, he might do us a lot of good yet."

CONDEMNED MAN. That's Bucky Harris, who is now in the position, somewhat, of a guy in the death house. He's waiting for Uncle Sam to step in and wave Travis and Buddy Lewis out of the Washington line-up and into the Army. When that happens sometime this month, Harris will know his first-division hopes are completely extinguished.

The departure of Travis and Lewis will take the body out of the Washington batting order. There isn't another fellow in it who can get runs across the plate or who deserves to hit fourth or fifth on a big league team. The Nats will be a puny outfit when the blow falls. The Devil himself could have conceived no more diabolical a thrust at the Nats than the selective service draw that turned up the numbers of Lewis and Travis.

McCARTHY UNHAPPY. The Yankees didn't get two ball players from Kansas City this year—only one. Phil Rizzuto and Gerry Priddy were supposed to provide the Yankees with an adequate shortstop-second base combination, but there is still a vacancy at second base. Rizzuto is the lone big leaguer of the pair, McCarthy is learning to his great disgust.

Priddy was supposed to be an important part of the Rizzuto-Priddy team, but each day he is revealing the fact that Rizzuto was carrying the load during the years in which they both starred at Kansas City. Priddy is daily proving that he does not belong with the Yankees. He's slow, he doesn't look as if he'll ever hit, and he is no ball of fire around second base. Currently, he isn't batting .200.

Sad fact is that the Detroit Tigers offered the Yankees $75,000 for Priddy last summer, but were turned down. And with Joe Gordon a permanent fixture at first base, the Yanks have no other second baseman. McCarthy must keep Gordon on first, if for no other reason than to make good on his declaration that Gordon can handle the job. McCarthy went on the limb to that effect when he sold Babe Dahlgren.

GAGSTER GOMEZ.—Proud boast of Lefty Gomez now is that he almost hit a home run in the big leagues. Gomez, whose usual quota of hits for the year scarcely exceeds a half dozen, banged a two-bagger against the right field fence at Yankee Stadium the other day that missed going into the bleachers by only a matter of inches.

The Yankee left hander was still talking about that blow yesterday in the Yankee dug out, and wondering aloud if he hadn't better give up pitching for a career in the outfield where his hitting would do the Yankees more good.

"You're really slugging that ball, Lefty," a teammate told him. "I see by the morning papers that you're tied with Rudy York. You're both hitting .143."

"Sure," said Gomez. "There's only a few of us left."

BROOKLYN BANTER. Red-hot Dodger fans were registering high disgust back in the first week of the season when the Giants were beating Brooklyn with great regularity. In fiery Brooklynese they were berating the Dodgers, particularly after two Brooklyn players in succession failed to offer at third strikes.

Yelled one outraged Brooklyn citizen:

"Them guys ain't gonna get them hits by keeping them bats on them shoulders!"

A few days later, Brooklyn outfielder Pete Reiser went down in a heap when conked on the skull by Ike Pearson, Phils' pitcher. They carried Reiser from the field on a stretcher. But a Brooklyn fan was entirely unsympathetic.

"There's that Reiser for you," he yelled. "I always knew he was brittle."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, April 27.—Views behind the news:

"Market Wise wins, King Cole third in Wood."—That just about leaves next Saturday's Kentucky Derby with only two favored nags, Our Boots and Porter's Cap. The other hot horses of a week and more ago, Whirlaway, King Cole, Dispose, Bold Irishman, etc. etc. have either shown that they cannot go more than a mile or cannot get ready in time. The widest-open Derby in a long time has narrowed down to fine colts. It is difficult to tell which will go to the post the favorite.

CONSIDINE

Our Boots is named after the pet dog of the daughter of his owner, Royce Martin, a dark browed, almost swarthy man who once was a friend of Pancho Villa. Porter's Cap is owned by the fabulous Charley Howard who with a comparatively small investment is making infinitely more out of racing than Lexington horsemen with huge breeding establishments and dizzily expensive racing chains.

Market Wise looked pretty good in winning the Wood, but not quite as good as King Cole looked bad. It can't be called a Derby threat even though it did remove one. Market Wise, wisely named from his sire, Broker's Tip, was bought last year by little Georgie Carroll, former jockey, for Louis Tufano, a Jamaica New York contractor. The price was only $1,000.

Hugh Fontaine, trainer of the rich Brookmeade Stable, and the man who ordered the sale, was standing in the paddock after Market Wise won. Carroll, who trained Market Wise for Tufano, ran up to him, threw his arms around the slightly discomfited Fontaine and kissed him.

Market Wise's daddy has been caught in the draft. Col. Ed Bradley, who owned Broker's Tip, has given this 1933 Kentucky Derby winner to the United States remount service. Broker's Tip is being bred to different types of mares in the hope of producing a better brand of cavalry horse. Bradley also has turned over another Derby winner, behave yourself, to the mount service.

"Bobo Newsom beaten for third time." Poor Bobo. This was the year when he was going to be able to strut his stuff more than ever before. And there hasn't been as natural a strutter as Bobo for years. He had emerged from the 1940 season a great hero, with two victories in the World Series and almost another one. During the winter his boss, Walter O. Briggs, had come forth with an announcement that he was the highest paid pitcher in the game. Old Bobo, who had to hide his Ring Lardnerish light under bushels of Browns and Senators for so long, was ready to act his long coveted role of a big shot.

So he gets chased to the showers the first three times he shows himself this season. However, we have not heard the last of him. The great man's pride unquestionably has been hurt. Bobo can't afford to lose many more. It took him years to win the acclaim of his home town of Hartsville, S. C. He can't let 'em down now. There will be considerable desperation in the long lank hide of brother Newsom, his next time out. Bobo probably has three puncture proof alibis for those first three losses. In the old days those wonderful alibis would sustain him and serve as balm for his soul. Now he has obligations: a big salary, and a place in Hartsville society.

"Perry and Skeen gain open tennis final." Whether you realize it or not, the long-awaited and often-mentioned United States Open tennis championship was completed yesterday at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. Much credit is due to White Sulphur for putting on the show. It meant, we understand, that the club had to resign from the U. S. L. T. A., which, of course, holds up its hand in horror at the very thought of tennis pros and amateurs playing in the same tournament. As has been often mentioned, the U. S. L. T. A. refuses to follow the example of the United States Golf Open, which has been a highly successful tournament for nearly half a century.

Few amateurs dared to enter the open tennis tournament, knowing that if they did they would be booted out of future amateur competition. The pros completely dominated the field. But if the U. S. L. T. A. ever comes to its senses and sponsors a real open, at a place like Forest Hills, amateurs such as Don McNeill, Bobby Riggs and Frankie Kovacs would go far in the tournament.

St. Louis Tops Chicago, 8-5, And Takes Lead

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 27.—The St. Louis Cardinals pounded Bill Lee and Rookie Paul Erickson from the mound with extra-base barrages today and went on to sweep the two-game series from the Chicago Cubs, 8 to 5, before 18,678 fans, and take the National League lead as the Dodgers defeated the Giants. The defeat was the Cubs' fifth in six games.

Morton Cooper went the route for the Cards, pitching steady ball after Rightfielder Bill Nicholson jarred him for a home run after two had walked in the first inning. It was Nicholson's fourth homer of the year. Cooper allowed only two other hits until the eighth and eight in all.

The Cardinals amassed 13 hits, including five doubles and a triple, the latter being by Johnny Mize, who also contributed a two-bagger.

Heath Gets Homer As 31,728 Fans See Tribe Take 4th From Bengals

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, April 27.—The Indians swung into first place today as Bob Feller and Jeff Heath's seventh-inning homer tamed the Detroit Tigers, 2-to-1, before 31,728 fans in Cleveland Stadium.

While the Yankees were taking it on the chin from Washington and Boston was rained out, Schoolboy Rowe was battling to keep the Tribe from top position, and very nearly succeeded.

The Indians were trailing in the seventh, after Charlie Gehringer's single had brought in Frank Croucher in the third. Hal Trosky opened with a double. Then Heath lifted one into the lower right field stands, scoring what proved to be the pay-off run.

Feller struck out five, getting Hank Greenberg twice, but issued three bases on balls, while Rowe fanned three and walked none.

The Indians' attack was none too strong. Except for the two seventh-inning hits, they had only Gee Walker's single in the second.

The Tigers got to Feller for two singles and four extra-base hits. Gehringer doubled in the first and his single in the third followed Croucher's double. George Stainback had a single in the fourth; Barney McCoskey doubled in the fifth, and Birdie Tebbetts tripled in the seventh.

Today's victory gave Feller two wins over the Tigers, in addition to one at the expense of St. Louis, after his opening-day loss to the White Sox. The Indians have won four from the Tigers, and dropped one.

King Cole to Miss Derby, to Run In Preakness

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, April 27.—Maryland Jockey Club officials said today they had been informed that Ogden Phipps' King Cole would pass up the Kentucky Derby in favor of the Preakness Stakes at Pimlico May 10.

A Jockey Club's spokesman said that owner Phipps and Trainer Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons had decided after King Cole's defeat in the Wood Memorial yesterday to ship him to Pimlico instead of to Churchill Downs.

Coldstream Stable's Curious Coin, second to Market Wise in the same race, also will give the Derby the go-by for the Preakness, the Jockey Club spokesman said. Curious Coin was a supplementary entry for Pimlico's $50,000-added classic.

The Wheatley Stable's Bold Irishman, a Fitzesimmons-trained colt, injured recently in training, is scheduled to arrive here Wednesday and make his first start in the Survivor, pre-Preakness test, May 6.

Other Derby eligibles expected to run in the Preakness instead of the Kentucky classic are Parker Corning's Attention and the Greentrees Stable's Monday Lunch.

Walters Beats Pirates for Reds, 3 to 2

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, April 27. — Bucky Walters evened accounts today with the Pittsburgh Pirates, who knocked him off the mound in his first start of the season, by twirling the Cincinnati Reds to a 3-2 victory.

Bucky gave six hits, a single and a home run by Elburt Fletcher in the first inning bringing both Pirates runs. Truett Sewell went the whole way for Frankie Frisch's crew, likewise allowed only six hits, but Seweli lost his own ball game by a wild pitch that brought in the winning run in the sixth.

The victory gave the world champions a clean sweep of the two-game Pirate series here and was their fourth out of five against Pittsburgh. They head east for an 11-game stand tonight with a record of six out of their last seven won.

William Hoar Rolls Perfect Pin Game In A.B.C. Match

By International News Service

St. Paul, April 27.—The first perfect game of the present American Bowling Congress Tournament was rolled today by William Hoar, a 48-year-old salesman from Chicago.

Playing in the doubles with Raymond Fliger, of Cicero, Ill., as his partner, Hoar scored games of 132-238-300—720, the "300" being a perfect game. Fliger's total of 588 gave them a combined total of 1,308 and sixth place in the doubles standings.

Dodgers Whip Giants, 7-5, for Sixth in Row

26,436 See Brooklyn Knock Rivals Out of Lead; Hubbell Shelled

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, April 27.—The swashbuckling Brooklyn Dodgers stretched their winning streak to six games today and knocked the New York Giants out of the National League lead with a 7 to 5 victory before 26,436 raucous flatbush fans.

It was a free-hitting struggle in which the Dodgers collected 14 hits and the Giants 11 and neither Hugh Casey nor Carl Hubbell, the starting pitchers, was able to finish.

Casey became the winner, however, through a three-run Dodger rally in the sixth, when he was removed for a pinch hitter. Lee Grissom, performing smoothly in relief, held the Giants' hitless over the last three innings.

Dolph Camilli's sixth homer of the new season opened the scoring off Hubbell in the second inning and the veteran southpaw was replaced by Bill Lohrman in the third when Brooklyn tallied twice more.

Lohrman was nicked for four hits and charged with the loss when the Dodgers punched across three more runs in the sixth. Dixie Walker drove in two of the scores with a double and came home himself on a single by Cookie Lavagetto.

Louisville, Ky., April 27.—Porter's Cap, C. S. Howard's Kentucky Derby threat, stopped the clocks at Churchill Downs here this afternoon by romping the Derby distance of a mile and a quarter in 2:04 4-5.

Oliver, Tailor Win In Golf Over Ghezzi, Whitehead

By the United Press

Lakewood, N. J., April 27.—A pair of Army corporals—Ed (Porgy) Oliver and Tommy Tailer—defeated Viv Ghezzi and Charles Whitehead, civilians designated to represent the Navy, 1 up in their challenge golf match today.

Last minute orders put Navy golfers who originally were assigned to tee off against the Army men into a blimp above the Lakehurst Naval Station. They chose Ghezzi, professional at Rumson, N. J., and Whitehead, New Jersey amateur champion, to go to bat against Oliver, professional who tied for the National Open last year, and Tailer, erstwhile Metropolitan Amateur champion.

The choice of two "hot" golfers, who were classed as Navy novitiates, looked like sound strategy, as Tailer had not played since he entered the service at Fort Dix, N. J., and Oliver had been out of competition for two months.

But if Oliver may be green as a doughboy he hasn't yet forgotten his golf. Oliver broke the old course record of 66 by one stroke. Ghezzi scored a 68, Whitehead a 73 and Tailer a 74. The par of the Lakewood course, which measures 6,433 yards, is 71.

Steve Allows Former Teammates 5 Hits; Travis Belts Triple And Two Doubles

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Yankee Stadium, New York, April 27.—Stop the presses. News was popping on the premises this afternoon. For the first time since a distant day in 1939, Washington beat the Yankees at Yankee Stadium. Thirteen consecutive defeats for the Nats on the Yankees' home lot ended today with a 6-3 Washington triumph, and the details are somewhat fascinating.

It was Steve Sundra, out there on the pitching mound for the Nats, reminding Manager Joe McCarthy, of the Yankees, that he used to pitch for New York, and rather well. The big former Yankee whom McCarthy sold to the Nats last month in Florida, tormented his old pals with a five-hit performance. A mob of 26,740 fans saw Sundra halt a four-game Yankee winning streak.

Too Much Travis, Sundra

Sundra and Cecil Travis ganged up on the Yankees. Sundra held 'em in the grip of his five-hit pitching, and Travis belted the daylights out of them. In the telling of the story of the game, Travis rates equal billing, and perhaps more than that.

Because it was Travis, only 24 hours out of a sick bed, who returned to the Nats' line-up and thieved the Yankees' extra base-hitting thunder. He celebrated his return to action with a three-bagger in his first time at bat. On his next appearance, he belted a double to right. On his third batting turn, he banged another two-bagger to right.

Travis was mixed up directly in the first four of the Nats' six runs, either driving them across the plate, scoring himself, or putting runs in scoring position. The Nats' other two runs were scored on occasions when Travis didn't get a batting turn.

Given a four-run lead in the first three innings, Sundra bore down magnificently against the Yanks, holding them to a single run in the first six innings. He pitched hitless ball in six of the nine innings, and in

Bobby Riggs Upset In Net Match

By the Associated Press

Asheville, N. C., April 27.—In one of the biggest upsets of the winter circuit, Billy Talbert, of Cincinnati, sixteenth ranking player, polished off the seeded Bobby Riggs, the Nation's No. 2 performer, 7—5, 6—4, 6—2, in the finals of the Land of the Sky tennis tournament today.

Talbert admittedly was playing the finest tennis of his life while Riggs looked listless throughout the match and was definitely having an off day.

Riggs teamed with Arthur Harman, Piedmont, Calif., to win the doubles title over Talbert and Alex Guerry, Chattanooga, Tenn., 6—3, 3—6, 6—3, 6—2.

Ben Chapman Benched by Nats, Welaj Plays

New York, April 27.—Taking with them the thrill of their first Yankee Stadium victory since 1939, the Nats entrained tonight for Chicago and their first swing through the West . . . with them also they took their new-fangled batting helmets. . . . Not all of the Washington players are wearing the padded skull caps, but Clark Griffith is expected to make it a compulsory rule that they do. . . . The Nats, incidentally, today were winning their first road game in six attempts . . . and, for the sake of the records, Steve Sundra's lifetime pitching average in the big leagues now shows 23 victories and only 11 defeats, the best percentage of any pitcher in the majors. . . . Which prompts the inquiry as to why the Yankees were prompted to sell him to the Nats for $10,000 last month. . . . Bucky Harris benched Ben Chapman in a surprise move today, sending Johnny Welaj to left field. . . . Harris said simply that he was giving Chapman a rest at a time when Chapman appeared to be in a batting slump. . . . Welaj got the ball

Misses Berg, Dettweiler Win at Kenwood, 3 and 2

Peacock and Bogart Give Six Strokes; Patty Scores a 76

Isabelle Block and Ed Wortman Woodmont Victors on Opening Day; Rippy, Gipe Lose

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Gaining their winning margin from a handicap allowance, the girl-pro combination of Patty Berg and Helen Dettweiler upset two of the Districts star amateurs, Roger Peacock and Ralph Bogart, 3 and 2, in a match before nerly 1,000 spectators yesterday at Kenwood.

Given a six-shot handicap allotment, according to the card, Misses Berg and Dettweiler used four of them to win holes and another to halve. They did not need the final stroke, which they would have received on the eighteenth.

The gallery came out to see Patty, once national champion, twice runner-up and winner of scores of other State and sectional titles, and they were not disappointed. The chubby red-head played the windy layout in 76 strokes from the back tees and with the exception of two or three bad holes hit the ball like a champion.

Patty Wins Gallery

Attired in dark blue culottes with a familiar beret to match and a light blue sweater with socks to match, Patty soon had the fans with her and earned even more respect when the scores showed she would have halved Bogart in an individual match and lost only 1 down to Peacock.

It may have been the wind, the early season play or the slick greens but whatever the trouble the scoring was higher than expected. Patty's 76 stood up as the best ball total of the winners although her partner was in there with valuable halves and several times putted for birdies after Patty had obtained her part but failed to drop one. Helen's principal trouble was locating the sand traps.

Peacock and Bogart were 75 and 76, respectively, and their best ball was only 72, one over regulation figures. The only birdies of the day were the fours of the amateurs on the fifth hole, an easy two-shot par five. Playing even, the amateurs would have won the match, 3 up.

The first two holes were halved but with their handicap strokes the girl pros won each and went two up. They used another handicap shot to halve the fifth and used two more to win the twelfth and thirteenth, par five holes where all four parred both holes.

The handicapping method was not too popular with the gallery, most of whom did not understand the strokes. Many felt it would have been better to pair one of the girls with an amateur.

Helen Drops Long Putt

The only holes of the match won outright were par threes. Peacock and Bogart each parred the short sixth as the girls were trapped. Patty chipped close for her par on the eighth and Helen dropped the longest putt of the day, a 25-footer as the amateurs were wild and took four. The girls were off line on ten and the amateurs won with pars while on the seventeenth, when the match was over, all four missed the green and par.

Patty was the most consistent fairway shooter of the quarter. The 22-year-old Minneapolis professional was seldom off line, although on the fifth hole she and Peacock each sent the fans scurrying with sliced drives. Three of the five shots she lost to par were on the par three holes. On the two-shoters Patty was usually down the middle and either on the green or apron in two. Miss Berg gave the impression that on a good day she would play the Kenwood course very near regulation figures.

The scores of 75 for Peacock, 76 for Miss Berg and Bogart and 82 for Miss Dettweiler were all with conceded putts, strictly match play scoring.

WOODMONT

Isabelle Block and Ed Wortman posted a combined score of 90 and knocked off 24 handicap strokes for a net 75 to win the Mixed Scotch foursome tournament at Woodmont as Gene Larkin reported the biggest opening day crowd in the club's history for the gala tournament program.

Mrs. Morris Cafritz and Cabot Feldman finished second with 100-21, 79, and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith, third, with 96-15—81. Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Hahn turned in the lowest gross score, a 90, with Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Harris second with 98. Two teams deadlocked for third gross, Ruth Simon and Allan Blustein, and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Peyser, both with 99s.

Cabot Feldman won the driving contest with just a yard to spare over Sam Samuels, 265 yards to 264. Joe Carroll was next with a 262-yard swat. Mrs. Dunbar Rogerthal hit one 185 yards to pace the ladies with Mrs. Gilbert Hahn second and Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith, third.

Winners in the novel handicap tournament arranged by L. V. Freudberg's golf committee as a part of the season's initial tournament were:

CONGRESSIONAL

Professional Wiffy Cox and former club champion Gene Pittman played Congressional's 460-yard second hole, toughest on the course, each in two strokes over the weekend. Cox holding a long iron shot on Saturday and Pittman a four-wood yesterday afternoon. The deuces were among the first ever to be scored on the difficult dog-leg hole. Cox also eagled the eighth and played the par 37 nine in 32 strokes.

C. H. McClain won the Sweepstakes tournament with an 82-16, 66, with J. M. Trice, 82-12, 70, and Frank Murray, 87-17, 70, deadlocking for second.

A. J. Cristadoro was an easy victor in the playoff for the opening-day trophy, posting a 90-23, 67, to an 87-11, 66, by V. T. Simmons.

BANNOCKBURN

What would you do if you attempted to knock a four-wood shot through a group of trees and it stuck in the fork of a leafy sky-scraper some 60 feet off the ground? Well, Wayne Smith left the ball there and foreited the tenth hole in a match at Bannockburn with F. J. Hanrahan, Ancel Cleary and A. L. Dowling.

Smith's drive on the tenth ended up in the ninth fairway and in attempting to clear the trees back into the tenth he hit a low wood shot that stuck in the crook of a tree. If you must have proof, the ball is still there, and probably will be for some time.

In a "bet-a-million" tournament, where so many "dollars" are given for first on the green, first in the cup, birdies, pars, etc., S. F. Roth was richer to the extent of $52,600 while John Mossberg pocketed a paltry $30,514 for second place at

Boston Beats Phillies, 8-3; Posedel Stars

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 27.—Bill Posedel, making his first start this season, held the Phillies to four hits and rapped out three of Boston's 14 hits himself today to give the Bees an 8-to-3 triumph before a crowd of 4,225.

It was Boston's first victory after four straight defeats, and when they tallied in the second inning the Bees broke a string of 21 consecutive scoreless innings.

Posedel, who had been on the shelf for five weeks with a sore arm, was deprived of a shutout when Ben Warren walloped a home run in the ninth stanza with two men on base to account for the Phillies' three markers.

Boston blasted Tom Hughes for four runs in the second on two walks, two hits and an error. They added another counter off Roy Bruner in the sixth and clicked Vito Tamulis for three more in the last two innings.

Buddy Scott Meets Hogan at Turner's

Al Gilbert and Billy Colbert to Clash In Semifinal of All-Star Card Tonight

By Tony Neri

In his last show before taking his boxing outdoors at Griffith Stadium, Promoter Joe Turner has lined up an all-star card of four eight-rounders tonight at his W Street Arena. Topping the talent and coming back to Washington after a year's basence is Buddy Scott, 190-pound Texan. Scott is scheduled to mix it with Irish Johnny Hogan, New Haven, Conn., heavyweight.

In the semifinal bout Al Gilbert, Washington's leading light-heavyweight will try to settle an old score with Billy Colbert, Houston, Tex., schoolboy sensation. It will be the third meeting between the pair. In their first get-together Gilbert took the decision but Colbert reversed it a short time later when the bout was stopped because of a cut over Gilbert's left eye.

This bout shapes up as the show-stealer of the card. Both boys can punch and are plenty fast. Gilbert has been drilling for the past week at Huron gym and Handler Bab Hayden has him in excellent shape. Colbert has been getting in his practice licks at the National Guard Armory under the watchful eye of Sam (The Mumbler) Sobel, veteran fight manager.

McDowell on Card

In another eight-rounder, "Wild Bill" McDowell, who has dropped but two decisions in nine local bouts, will face Washington's El Franklin, who recently beat El Brookman, conqueror of Harvey Massey at the arena last week. McDowell needs no introduction to local fans. He caused a mild riot in his first appearance here by his looping rights and powerful left. He holds two decisions over Phil Furr. McDowell's only losses here are to the Cocoa Kid and Holman Williams, both of whom are top welterweights.

Two newcomers will be unveiled in the featherweight class. They are Henry Hook, now campaigning under the banner of Harry (The Horse) Raskin and Joey Stack, popular little Philadelphia fighter. Hook holds victories over Lou Salica, present bantam king, Sisto Escobar and Frankie Pace. Stack, raised in the Frankford Orphanage where he learned to use his dukes early, outpointed Al Mancini last month in Providence, and also Lloyd Pines in Cumberland, Md.

Predicts Great Things

Manager Harry Raskin, Buddy Scott's Svengali, holds big things in store for his fighter. Scott is 15 pounds heavier than last year and the added weight has put more oomph into his punches. Raskin plans a busy summer program for the Texan. If Scott licks Hogan tonight he may be pitted against Melio Bettina, of Beacon, N. Y., at an outdoor show.

A four-rounder will open the card between Dixie Walker and Tommy Hoover at 8:30 p. m. All service men in uniforms will be admitted for 60 cents. Popular prices will prevail for the general public.

Oddfellows Win, 20-2

The Odd Fellows Ball Club defeated Railway Express, 20-2, on the Monument Grounds yesterday afternoon. J. Burger, pitcher, and M. Burger, outfielder, starred for the winners.

Chisox Defeat Browns, 7-6; Dietrich Hurls

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, April 27.—The Chicago White Sox took advantage of the Browns' inability to hit in the clutch today and came from behind to win, 7 to 6, for their second successive one-run victory over the St. Louis Americans.

Although he allowed 12 hits, Bill Dietrich went the route for Chicago and marked up his third straight victory. It was Elden Auker's first setback of the year.

Mamakos, Vigh to Drill At Uline Today

Ernie Vigh, Newburgh (N. Y.) middleweight sensation, and Steve Mamakos, Washington's Golden Greek, the two principals of Ray Alvis' show Wednesday night at Uline Arena, will hold public drills today in the huge $700,000 ice palace. Vigh will work out at 1 o'clock and Mamakos will follow at 2 p. m.

Wednesday's fight, scheduled for 10 rounds, promises to be the best here in some time. Both boys are noted for their aggressiveness and willingness to mix it. The hard-punching Vigh brings to the District a record of 37 knockouts in 55 professional fights. He has had his man down in every one of his encounters at least once. Although only fighting for a little over two years the 21-year-old Newburgh youth has met the best and in his last bout had Billy Soose, No. 1 middleweight contender, on the verge of a K. O. before the bell saved him.

Zale Beat Mamakos

In Mamakos' last battle he was beaten by N. B. A. Champion Tony Zale in Chicago. The fight drew $49,000 and since the meeting, two Chicago promoters have been clamoring for Mamakos to meet opponents in the Windy City. The Golden Greek scored a hit in his first fight there when he decisioned Milt Aron, outstanding middleweight.

The winner of Wednesday night's fight has been favored for a shot at the victor of the Ken Overlin-Billy Soose winner in a championship fight at Griffith Stadium.

An excellent supporting card has been arranged. In the top preliminary, Ray (Sugar) Robinson, generally hailed as the next lightweight champion, will meet veteran Joe Ghouly, of St. Louis, in an eight-rounder. Robinson is undefeated in his 14 pro fights, having scored 11 knockouts.

DeChard on Card

Jimmy DeChard, Washington's good-looking heavyweight prospect, will make his second start in the paid ranks when he squares off with Nick Carter. In DeChard's first fight he K.O'd Joe Linsie in the initial round on the Baer-Galento card. He will probably work out today at Uline.

In other six-rounders, Frankie Wills faces El Brookman; Young Foster meets Willie (Babe) Ritchie, Chris Dundee's new heavyweight hope from Texas; and Billy Banks, the District's popular colored fighter, engages Irish Eddie Hughes.

Second place went to Mr. and Mrs. Bob Copeland, with 1,176, and third to Mr. and Mrs. William Minson, with 1,174.

Colonials Meet Terps, Hoyas In Baseball

By Jack Munhall

The college sports schedule takes on an intracity flavor this week when George Washington meets Maryland and Georgetown in baseball and American University in track, and G. W. tests its nine against Georgetown's crack outfit.

Saturday will be a whopper of a day with the Colonials and Hoyas clashing on the diamond at Griffith Stadium, and Maryland holding four events at College Park. Activity at Byrd Stadium will begin at noon when concurrently the Terps will engage V. P. I. in a dual track meet while some 450 high school athletes take part in the annual field day program. At 1 p. m. the Terps and Colonials clash in tennis; at 2 Maryland's baseball team clashes with Washington College and at 4 o'clock the Old Liner lacrossemen gird themselves for a titanic struggle with Princeton. Maryland, upset by Army Wednesday, must beat Princeton to retain a chance to successfully defend its intercollegiate stick title.

The seven-day period, which includes 11 baseball games, will be launched at American University today at 2:30 when Staff Cassell's Eagles are hosts to Western Maryland in a return baseball game which will afford the Green Terrors opportunity of avenging their 13-4 defeat by A. U. last week.

Tuesday G. W.'s nine makes its first road start of the season in a game with Penn State at State College, Georgetown entertains Temple, and American returns to action with Randolph-Macon.

Wednesday will find Catholic University's undermanned track squad invading College Park for a dual meet with Maryland, the first between the rivals in several years, and on Thursday George Washington's nine has a try at Virginia, newest and one of the keenest of the Colonials' sports foes. The C. U.-Maryland meet may be moved back to Tuesday, it was announced last night, because both teams have meets scheduled Saturday.

Friday will be a day of rest for all but A. U., which is at home to Loyola of Baltimore.

Besides all the goings-on Saturday at Griffith Stadium and Maryland, C. U.'s track team will be at Newport News Apprentice School. American's track team will be at Huntingdon, W. Va., for a triangular meet with Juniata and Susquehanna.

George Washington has hopes—but not many—of beating both Maryland and Georgetown to help compensate for their double defeats by both teams last year. The Colonials will be the favorite over the Terrapins, but they'll be decided shortenders in the Georgetown game.

Short on pitchers, Coach Morris of G. W. is planning to have Eddie Amendola do double duty during the week. Amendola is to start the Penn State and Georgetown games, while McGinnis tackles Maryland and Jack Redinger or Red Kloak goes to the mound against Virginia.

George Washington is facing these four games with little prospect of regaining the services of Bobby Gilham, the shortstop who was spiked and has been inactive since the late and lamented game with American University.

Pimlico Track Opens Stake-Studded 12-Day Meet Today

$2,500 Test At 6 Furlongs First Feature

Jay Jay Tackles Clyde Tolson and Others; Jumpers in $2,000 Struggle

Pimlico opens today. Baltimore's old Hill Top track, where the clubhouse, a few years back, was given over to the ghosts of ancient Preakness winners and where the grandstand belonged to a couple of guys from Charles Street, starts another of those two-week meetings of the stake-studded variety that have made Pimlico sessions virtual gold rushes for several seasons.

It is reported that Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, elected president of the Maryland Jockey Club on a "Get out of the red with young Alfred" tickets, has issued orders that any spider weaving other than a golden web during the 12 days will be ejected from the grounds and his badge will be taken up.

But all kidding aside, Pimlico is offering the best brand of the sport of kings every attempted hereabouts. The programs are so alluring that every day will seem like Saturday. Stakes of $2,500 and $5,000 will be batted around like ping pong balls and the climax, as it should be, will be the 1941 running of the Preakness on May 10.

Spring Handicap Today

As a starter, Brother Vanderbilt and the boys have whooped up an excellent opening day card. They have tossed the $2,500 Baltimore Spring Handicap at the boys and, as if that wasn't enough topflight action for one day, they have sprinkled the infield for a $2,000 steeplechase.

Let's hear a few words from Dave Wood's publicity department on the subject of this week's racing:

Proven horses who will seek the winner's share of today's $2,500 added purse are Impound, Cherry Jam, Clyde Tolson, Rough Time, Jay Jay, Sassy Lady, Abrasion and Happy Lark. With the exception of Impound, all have displayed creditable form including Cherry Jam, being a two-time winner at Keeneland including the Phoenix Handidcap. Impound, the Baltimore topweight with an assignment of 120 pounds, will be making his first start since winning his only outing at Santa Anita Park.

Rennert Popular

Another large field is indicated for the Rennert Handidcap, the $2,500 feature set for tomorrow. This dash of 6 furlongs is confined to 3-year-olds and the speedy members of this division being pointed for the event appear to be Madigama and Harvard Square, the topweights at 124 pounds each; Ocean Blue, Big Stakes, Handy Tom, John's Star, Pete Jr., Barrymore and Cis Marion.

Wednesday's attraction, the $2,500 added Gittings Handicap at a mile and one-sixteenth, attracted 21 nominations and according to the weights imposed by Handicapper Charles L. McLennan more than half of the candidates may accept the issue. The probabilities include Honey Cloud, Son Altesse, Cavalier, Foxshade, Abbe Pierre, Saguenay II, Westnesia, True Call, Royal Man, Corydon and possibly Fanelon and Hypnotist II. The latter two may be in the division of the Belair Stud stable to be sent here from New York by James Fitzsimmons.

Chiquita Mia and Ben Shaba, which easily defeated the others competing in the Aberdeen Stakes, were not nominated for the Rai Parr and this dash of four and one-half furlongs for two-year-olds occupying top position on Thursday's program therefore is likely to bring out a good share of the 58 nominees. The eligibles of known ability include Joe Ray, Colchis, Treemontier, Fade, Wallingford, Equipet, Doctor Reder, Pete's Bet and Kind Gesture, but others may be brought to light in the pair of overnight contests for two-year-olds carded for opening day.

Steeplechase Friday

Devotees of the cross-country sport for many miles around may be expected to gather at Pimlico Friday to witness the annual renewal of the Jervis Spencer Steeplechase Handicap, whose 22 subscriptions include many of the Nation's most capable jumpers, including Quakerstreet, Buck Langhorne, Salem, Canio, Annibal, Ossabaw, Bagpipe, Dilly's Love, Kellsboro, Deanslaw, Red Rain and Scotch Tar.

Promising 3-year-old fillies from New York and Kentucky are due to assemble at Pimlico Saturday for the Pimlico Oaks, with its $10,000 in added money. Wheatley Stable's Dark Imp, Greentree Stable's Tangled and Ogden Phipps' Devil Girl may come from New York for the mile and one-sixteenth affair and possibilities from the Blue Grass are J. E. Widener's Mystic Isle, H. M. Woolf's Silvestra, Valdina Farm's Valdina Myth and Calumet Farm's Proud One. The principal Maryland candidates are E. K. Bryson's Cis Marion, R. S. Clark's Boreale, Breckinridge Long's Nasca, Tower Stable's React and Crisan Oglebay's Level Best.

The Oaks, which will be having its twenty-ninth running, is the season's first outstanding attraction for 3-year-old fillies and is expected to give a line on the championship in this division.

Central Meets Strong Rival In Tech Nine

Though it smashed Roosevelt somewhat ruthlessly by way of opening defense of its interhigh baseball crown, the real strength of Central High's diamond force will not be known until tomorrow when it squares off with Tech in one of five series games this week.

Their clash on the McKinley field should practically eliminate one or the other from serious title consideration, for Tech boasts as hard-hitting a group of veterans as any team in town. Tomorrow's other interhigh battle brings together another favorite, Eastern, and Woodrow Wilson at the park of the latter.

On Friday the schedule calls for three games, featured by Eastern's tiff with Western, another preseason favorite. Tech takes on the twice-beaten nine of Roosevelt and Anacostia and Central face off.

Central Plays W.-L.

Still unable to find a place to practice, Central's "Gas House Gang," which has worked out only five times to date, today goes to Arlington for a meeting with Washington-Lee at 3:30. Coach Jack Ray thinks his chances of whipping the powerful Little Generals is almost nil, but at least he can use the engagement as important practice for the Tech affair tomorrow.

The only other game on today's card sends an improved Gonzaga High club to Devitt Prep.

From early indications, the public school nines appear to boast more strength than their private school, county and parochial school mates in this vicinity. This with the exception of the aforementioned Washington-Lee team. And of the public high clubs, Western, Eastern and Tech seem the best with Central, as mentioned before, still a doubtful quantity.

Blair Looks Good

In Montgomery County the finest may be Montgomery Blair, of Silver Spring. The Blairmen easily turned back N. T. S. last week, 5-0, and in the process showed considerable ability in both the hitting and pitching departments.

Gonzaga's representatives have had an up and down season so far, but may eventually wind up with a better than .500 average. Little is known of the Georgetown Prep delegation which Orrel Mitchell is getting together in Garrett Park.

Of the private schools, Landon may prove the outstanding. Sidwell-Friends, with few youngsters to chose from, has a better-than-average team, but Woodward and St. Alban's have found difficulty getting started.

Harris Earns Cameo Victory

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., April 27.—A home run by Bill Harris with two mates aboard in the seventh inning gave the Cameo Furniture Co. baseball team of Washington a 10-7 victory over the Frederick Hustlers before a large crowd here today. Harris wrecked the Hustlers twice last season in the same manner with circuit clouts late in the game. The contest was loosely played, with a total of 12 errors and 26 hits.

Georgetown Frosh Relaymen Lauded for Penn Performance

Catholic University Coach Calls Showing Saturday Phenomenal

Some observers were a bit disappointed when the Georgetown freshman one-mile relay team failed to smash the Penn Relays mark Saturday, but Dorsey Griffith, the well-informed Catholic University coach is not one of them.

On the other hand Griffith believes the Hoya yearlings' time of 3:19—just one-tenth of a second off the mark—was a phenomenal performance, since the Hilltoppers ran from an outside position and, worse, their lead-off runner was shaken up at the start.

"Up there at the Penn Relays," said Griffith, whose team won the Mason-Dixon Confernece mile championship for the second straight year," when you run from an outside position you actually have to run yards further than the teams which draw inside pole positions.

Ran Longer Distance

"Georgetown started from eighth or tenth position and so, when a leading Georgetown runner finished up his quarter and came around to pass the baton he had to run 4 yards out of his way to contact his mate. Then his mate had to retrace the 4 yards to get back over to the inside of the track where the leading runner always runs. Multiply those 8 yards by 3, which is the number of times this happened—and you find that Georgetown actually covered the distance in about 3:16. And that's pretty fair for freshmen or varsities, either."

The arrangement at the Penn Relays whereby the teams retain the positions they drew before the start of the race under the "stagger" system is a particular beef with Coach Griffith. A respected track official who annually stages a successful indoor meet for Catholic University, Griffith advocates that the Penn promoters change their system.

Should Copy Drake Style

"They should interchange the pole positions in the relays so that the teams which draw bad starting positions could make up for it by getting a better one on the second and fourth legs. That's how they do it at the Drake Relays and I believe that's the reason that better times are often turned in there."

Les MacMitchell's work in the weekend Penn Carnival was, in the opinion of many competent observers the most brilliant ever witnessed in the 47-year-old meet. "Long John Woodruff and others" duplicated MacMitchell's feat of anchoring three winning relay teams, but backers of the N. Y. U. junior point out that none of them was as versatile.

In fact, MacMitchell's 48.3 anchor leg for the Violets' 1-mile team was amazing even to some of his admirers, coming as it did after Leslie had turned in his splendid 4:09.4 mile in sparking the N. Y. U. 4-mile team to victory. That quarter coupled with his 4:09.4 mile Saturday, and his times of 4:13.6 and 1:54.1 Friday constituted a truly great performance.

Many spectators Friday foresaw in a young Boyertown High School miler named G. Karver the coming successor to MacMitchell as the king of the collegiate milers. Karver, coming from far behind to run a 4:26 mile, led his team to the scholastic distance medley championship. Karver is a protege of Gene Venzke, the former Pennsylvania star and the first collegiate miler to turn 4:10. MUNHALL

KENWOOD

Frank Schrider came through with a birdie-studded round to win the Cherry Blossom tournament at Kenwood with a 78-12, 66, over L. C. Roy's 84-16, 68. Jack Keele was only one over par with a 72 despite a trio of three-putt greens and won low gross over Johnny Bergelin's 74.

Charles L. Vaile and Dick Weaver won the four-ball best-ball match play championship by defeating J. Jago and K. McLaughlin, 1 up, in the first flight finals.

About Boats By Andrews

This is the time of year when your boating friends advertise their hobby by paint on their hands and persistent grime about their knuckles as well as by the salty conversation which no waterman can eschew when spring rolls round again.

ANDREWS

This is fitting-out time, and the dozen or so marine railways in Washington are busy. Alongside clubs and municipal docks, men in overalls swarm and gals in halters defy the last chill breath of winter to paint, polish and set things to rights.

Already the annual weekend pilgrimage to Gunston Cove has started and the Potomac River Sailing Association has attempted to herald the new season with its annual spring series. It so happened that spring kicked up more than somewhat last Sunday, blowing a 30-mile gale which upset a few sailing craft and brought postponement of the series until today. The races will be finished in Georgetown Channel this afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock, off Hains Point.

The yacht clubs are shaking out their ensigns, as well, and are making ready for a season they expect to be one of the best Washington has known. Old Dominion, down at Alexandria, and Washington Yacht Club have held their annual elections and have opened their seasons.

Capital Yacht Club, its new Government-built wharfs all finished and in service, will open formally today with a reception in the clubhouse on Maine Avenue from 4 to 6 p. m.

Corinthian Yacht Club, the District's largest, will hold its annual barbecue next Sunday on the lawn in front of the clubhouse, if the weather permits. The club held its last dance of the winter last night by way of signing off indoor activities and taking to the indoor activities and taking to the water for another season.

All this maritime activity, which will be increased mightily in the next couple of weeks, brings up again the fact that yachting is a sport with a dark side as well as a bright side. That dual nature will be even more prominent this season than in seasons past for a very good reason.

In connection with the Nation's war effort, the population of Washington has been enormously increased in the last half-year. Since yachting last was seasonable, thousands of young men and young women have come to the National Capital from all the rest of the country to take Government jobs with Government hours, which leave them plenty of time for yachting or any other sport to which they may incline.

That is to say, the river this summer will carry many more boats, sail and power, large and small, than last. Too many of these boates will be skippered and manned by folks who know litle more about the water than that it is wet and less than that about boats and their idiosyncrasies. Unless fortune is kinder than anyone has a right to expect, this season will be blighted by its quota of explosions, fires, collisions and such like exhibitions of carelessness or ignorance.

About all one can do is to sit back and hope everyone who ventures out in a boat this year remembers that vaporized gasoline confined in the bilges of a boat is a terrifically explosive substance, and takes precautions accordingly. Possibly it is too much to hope for that or to hope that all boats which put out for a little cruise will be equipped with adequate fire extinguishers, ground tackle, life preservers, and at least one individual aboard sober enough to see the Norfolk-Washington steamers before they come aboard him.

In the past, unfortunately, all these desirable matters have occasionally been overlooked with the result that yachting as a sport has received a reputation it does not deserve.

Uncle Sam has done much to nullify the most glaring faults of yachtsmen with more enthusiasm than thoughtfulness, but even he has never been entirely successful. This year, reported in this column last fall, even more stringent safety regulations have been adopted. But strict enforcement of such regulations, no matter how fine they may be, is impossible.

It is up to the yachtsman himself, owner, skipper, or guest, to see that his own cruise is as happy as only absolute safety can make it.

Science Building Cornerstone Laid At Trinity College

The cornerstone for a science building at Trinity College was laid yesterday by the Very Rev. Thomas Verner Moore, O. S. B., of Catholic University.

Following the ceremony, members of the faculty and student body gathered for dinner in the dining hall.

Ed Don George Returns Here In Wrestling

Ed Don George, who came along in the lush days of wrestling to claim the world's championship, has been signed to headline next Thursday night's show at Turner's Arena. Opponent for the erstwhile titleholder will be Hans Kampfer, the Mighty Oak, himself a one time holder of the European championship.

Don George, product of professional football, numbered among his victims such erstwhile champions as Dick Shikat, Ali Babi and Dave Levin. He also scored over Ray Steele, the present National Wrestling Association champion and Everett Marshall, another former N. W. A. champion.

Featuring a powerful flying tackle, Don George will make his first appearance at the Arena in two years. But wrestling fans can not forget the big gates he drew both at the old Auditorium and at Griffith Stadium when Jimmy Londos, Rudy Dusek and Danno O'Mahoney were also the rage of the mat world.

With fans asking for a return of the old faces and also new talent, Promoter Joe Turner is complying with their requests by bringing in such talent as Don George, the Buffalo ace, and Mighty Oak Kampfer.

Promoter Turner also hopes to bring back the Green Hornet, mysterious masked grappler.

Woman, 2 Men Burn to Death In Pa. Jail Fire

Belle Vernon, Pa., April 27 (AP).—All three prisoners—a woman and two men—perished today when a fire damaged the unguarded borough lockup in this western Pennsylvania town.

The dead were identified as Frances Novosel, 26, Fayette City, and James Moran, 57, a Clarksburg (W. Va.) glasscutter, both charged with drunk and disorderly conduct, and Nick Pushnak, Charlerol, charged with disorderly conduct.

Mora nand Pushnak were in the bull pen underneath the women's quarters, when the blaze broke out. Some time after Police Chief Frank Camino wetn off duty, leaving the lockup unattended.

After a preliminary investigation, Camino and Coroner L. R. Harrington said Miss Novosel had apparently set fire to rags and a chair and thrown them out of her cell "when it became too hot."

R. A. F. Pilot Tests Airacobra, Called 'World's Fastest'

Buffalo, N. Y., April 27 (AP).—A Royal Air Force flier completed performance tests today in a Bell Airacobra and company officials immediately announced "the tests proved the fighter plane to be the fastest single-motored craft now in production."

Although forbidden to discuss performance specifications, a Bell Aircraft Corporation spokesman added that a "ceiling in excess of 35,000 feet was established" and that the plane's cannon and six caliber machine guns had been tested satisfactorily at altitudes above 30,000 feet in temperatures of 68 degrees below zero.

The plane's top speed has been reported to be around 400 miles an hour. In war paint, the interceptor pursuit was piloted by R. A. F. Wing Commander James R. Adams.

Contract Bridge

Whether you are a problem child or not, getting peeved at the card table is a costly proposition unless you have an intrepid and skillful a partner as Cecil Head. With the South cards of today's hand, Cecil, a little unsure of his partner, took out what would have been an exceedingly profitable double. Piqued at this, North carried him to a game contract which would have been lost by a player less brilliant than the pride of the Yale Club.

Cecil made the bid by the reverse-dummy procedure, as follows: The ace of spades took the first trick and a spade was ruffed by South. The dummy was re-entered through the successful heart finesse and the last spade trumped.

The ace of clubs was cashed, catching East's queen; the ace and king of diamonds was trumped by South. The ace of hearts provided an entry for another diamond ruff. West overruffed with the club king, but the contract was safe. Dummy's ten and eight of clubs were winners, and Cecil lost only one heart and trump king.

Attempting to trump a heart in dummy will fail; for if the hearts are started at once, West will take the third round and lead his last heart, allowing East to win his club queen. If declarer should take the club ace first, West will lead trumps on taking the heart.

Oil Wins Wars

By Roger W. Babson

Germany in 'Devil of a Fix'

So many columnists are commenting upon or interpreting the war news that it ill behooves me to "butt-in." I, however, do wish to again remind readers that food and oil may be the deciding factors—especially oil. Germany really went to war to secure independent oil supplies for herself. If she succeeds in doing so, she will have won and be willing to quit. If she does not succeed, in time, she will be licked. It makes no difference how many thousands of planes, tanks and submarines Germany has unless she has the oil needed to operate them efficiently.

ROGER W. BABSON

The unthinking public believe that—thus far—Germany has won great victories. They point to the conquest of Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, France, Belgium, Holland, Norway, Bulgaria and Rumania. With the exception of the last, none of these are oil-producing countries. Therefore, they really are a drag upon Germany's oil supply. In fact, Germany is practically cut off today from oil except from Russia and Rumania. Italy, Spain and other European countries are helpless to supply Germany with oil.

Italy has not been defeated in battle either on land or sea. She has lost only about 15 per cent of her navy, tanks and planes. The reason Italy is doing so little is because of her lack of oil. The "control" of the Mediterranean means the control of the Axis' oil supply. So long as Great Britain and her few allies can shut off Germany's oil supply, Germany is headed for defeat. Considering the oil Germany now has on hand and is getting from abroad, she will be in a very serious position during 1942 unless she breaks through to Persia and the oil fields of the Near East. This is stated notwithstanding the synthetic oils Germany is making from various coal products.

Just now Russia is the uncertain quantity. Russia has a fair oil production and has been sending some oil to Germany; but Germany has not been getting as much oil as she needs. Russia, moreover, is in a fix. She does not want Germany or England to win the war; but Russia knows that if she shuts Germany off of oil altogether, then Germany would turn her great war machine on Russia and probably make Russia give her oil.

The trouble in the Pacific is also a struggle for oil. So far as land is concerned, Japan has already conquered far more than she can use or digest. It is the oil of Borneo and Sumatra which Japan really wants. Germany has promised to divide this with Japan if Germany wins the war. It is oil which the foreign ministry of Japan recently discussed with Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin.

Oil is at the bottom of our "friendly neighbor" policy with Mexico and other Latin-American countries. We have no real love for them, nor have they for us. Europe is the natural market for South American products. Trade will again flow naturally east and west, not north and south, after the war is over. Until then, however, the United States is bribing Mexico and the other Central and South American oil-producing countries not to ship any oil to Germany, Italy or other friends of Germany.

To enable Great Britain to supply herself and her allies with oil is the real reason for the Ethiopian campaign. The Italian colonies are not good per se, but they did endanger Great Britain shipping oil from Perzia to England, Greece, Turkey, Egypt and other Britain allies. For the present, this supply is safe. Contrarily, so long as the Suez Canal situation can continue in English control, Germany is endangered. The blockade on the Atlantic is keeping oil from reaching Germany by sea.

The truth is that Germany is today in a devil of a fix. Bombing England does not give Germany oil; sinking English ships does not give Germany oil. The English know this and hence are calmly taking their punishment on both land and sea. Germany's only hope—outside possibly of Russia—is to protect the oil fields of Rumania and to break through to Persia and Iraq. Hence, the Balkan war is a life-and-death struggle for Germany and Italy; while Britain could lose the Mediterranean and still win the war.

While all this is going on, the United States is preparing to deliver oil by ship, plane and truck to Great Britain and her allies. Submerged oil transports are being designed which cannot be spotted by German planes; quantities of oil trucks are being purchased by our Government; while our boys are being taught to drive them. The entire English, American, Chinese and Grecian strategy is being directed to shut off the oil supply of Germany, Italy, Japan and other nations which side with Germany.

Whether or not the above Allied strategy will be successful, only the future can tell. The newspaper reports some days are discouraging. But let no reader get discouraged. It is yet a long, long way from Greece to the oil fields toward which Germany is marching. Furthermore, time is greatly in Great Britain's favor. Germany can easily become "land poor" and collapse because of overextension.

Sloan Cites Activity

"The period under review was characterized by a rapidly rising trend of industrial activity along a broad front, reflecting the stimulation to the economy by the program of national defense. . . . "Practically speaking, this is what is happening—as projects involving national defense develop, they act as motivating centers. Pay rolls

"Your Town and Ours," a half-hour program dedicated to the worthy purpose of telling the people of the Nation about Washington in an informal and entertaining way is to make its debut over WJSV at 6:30 tonight.

As a matter of fact, the program, supervised by WJSV's program director, Lloyd Dennis, has been heard over other Columbia network stations throughout the country for the past several weeks and has been enthusiastically received. But other more-or-less long-term commitments prevented WJSV from airing it until now.

Eric Sevareid, CBS's former Paris correspondent, now stationed in Washington, gives his reactions to the Washington scene. The popular author and lecturer, Strickland Gillilan, brings you some of its humorous aspects. Gunnar Back interviews people who have interesting jobs around town. Previously they've been a White House policeman, a hotel doorman, a sightseeing guide, a sidewalk camera man, as well as people with unusual jobs in Government departments. Tonight his guest is to be Carl Musebeck, who is rather cryptically described as an "insect identifier."

A feature tonight, too, will be a salute to Winchester, Va., with Queen Shenandoah, the 18th, as a guest. She's Mollie Foulkes Lee, who'll reign over the Apple Blossom Festival starting May 1.

The Post Radio Highlights

Daylight Savings Time is now in effect in many Eastern States, and over the networks, causing more than one headache for radio fans seeking their favorite programs, and for editors seeking to show them where they are. Generally speaking, all programs move up an hour, though soap opera listeners will find the daytime tragedies are a baffling mixup, what with their new summer schedules. A few of the evening programs are shifted to new periods, too.

1:15 p. m., WINX—Another preview of a bit of the National Folk Festival, opening this week.

8, WJSV—"Wife, Husband and Friend," are portrayed, respectively, by Priscilla Lane, George Brent and Gail Patrick.

9:30, WJSV—Ah, here they are! Instead of their usual spot, which should be at 6:30 by all the rules of daylight savings, the Bumsteads come on at 9:30. Switches like this make us very happy at this time.
